TO Dean M. Lyle Spence of the School of Journalism who has given Syracuse University students eight years of able leadership. Trained as a journalist, developed in research and study, and perfected by administrative responsibilities in education, he has shown all the qualities for guiding Syracuse to a new height. His is the conviction that training in journalism should be specialized, more concentrated, and in that respect he is inaugurating this fall a complete departmentalization of the School of Journalism. It is the first specialization program of its kind to be adopted by any journalism school in the country.

In a spirit of sincere cooperation and as a sign of our esteem, Dean Spencer, we dedicate the 1942 Onondagan to you. In thus honoring you we feel that we have honored ourselves.

Memories of places and faces are so fleeting . . . they sometimes escape us forever . . . that is why we tried to make the 1942 ONONDAGAN so inclusive . . . we gave the sophomores their own section just a few turns from the juniors and seniors . . . the candid section is organized into a seasonal summary of the year which includes a running comment on anything and everything that struck our respective noses for news — and pictures to help you to remember and to visualize . . . the new sports section of the best pictures of the various sports should make all sports fans happy . . . the candid of each sorority and fraternity tell their own stories . . . despite our honorable intentions, errors have stealthily crept in . . . we can only say we're very sorry but we hope you like your book and that it becomes increasingly valuable each year.

IN the Hall of Languages, headquarters for the College of Liberal Arts, students climb up creaky old stairs to classes in English, philosophy and the languages. Over in Lyman Hall, midst the odor of formaldehyde, and the staring glares of ancient fossils, they delve into the sciences. Within Bowne Hall and Maxwell School of Citizenship many other Liberal Arts courses are taught. They overspread the campus — these seekers of the more cultured aspect of life. 1,634 of them are headed by Finla Crawford, the dean of the largest and oldest college on the hill.

The curriculum offered is organized to provide students with a well-rounded, balanced knowledge of the arts. In their last two years, they can specialize in any of the desired fields within the college itself or combine majors with the other schools on the campus under a dual enrollment system.

The college's objectives are three-fold: to provide fundamental tools to be used in constructing a life program, to develop citizenship with a broad perspective, and to enable men to lead a successful life. It is from within its rank that the wearers of Phi Beta Kappa keys emerge — nationally recognized members of the honorary for excellence in scholarship.

College of FINE ARTS

EIGHT hundred and fifty students of art and music create an atmosphere of a veritable Latin Quarter in picturesque Crouse college. Would-be Michaelangelos, bedecked in gaily colored slacks and smocks, dash about the ancient halls with drawing boards under arm, while prospective Jenny Linds trill scales and sing intervals-of-a-third all day long. Frequent exhibitions of student and faculty work are shown in Crouse and also in the main library for the benefit of students in other colleges. Musicians appear in many recitals each year, several of these being open to the public.

The fifty-four faculty members, headed by Dean Harold L. Butler are known throughout the country for their excellence. Their pupils graduate as the proud possessors of degrees from the first Fine Arts college in the United States.

THE ARCHITECTS, enrolled in the College of Fine Arts, climb to the fourth floor of Slocum Hall to attend classes. The department has draughting, class, and cast rooms, a tool shop and a material museum — well-equipped to graduate efficient draftsmen. Students must complete a five-year course in architecture or landscape architecture in order to receive their bachelor's degree.

It isn't all work for Jack, the architect, however. He attends dances given by his associates, and does defense draughting for the city — with pay!

College of MEDICINE

DOWN the long, cool halls of the Med School hurry 172 students in white, intent upon assimilating the medical knowledge of the past and present to better serve humanity. A competent faculty of 22, headed by Dr. Herman Weiscotten, teach in 24 departments to help Johnny become an A-1 doctor.

School of NURSING

THE 86 women enrolled in the School of Nursing devote three and a half years of concentrated study toward becoming professional registered nurses. These youthful benefactors of humanity receive their nurses caps after a pre-clinical training period and assume responsibility in the wards under the supervision of the head nurses in the Good Shepherd Hospital.

School of LIBRARY SCIENCE

"LET'S go to the Library — you always see so many people," is a typical remark heard on campus. Besides being a favorite spot for student rendezvous and a place sacred to study, the Library is the headquarters for the School of Library Science. This school, directed by Wharton Miller, is limited to forty-five graduate students. In the line of field work and observation, they take a five-day jaunt to New York City to places of interest to librarians, and have two weeks of blocked practice outside of the university. They become ardent advocates of the "silence please" signs and soon learn to climb agilely the narrow stairs leading to the book stacks.

Professional library training recognizes not only mastery of the technique of library science, but also an appreciation of the larger aspects of library service as a part of education and as a force in society. Realizing the practical value of a broad cultural background, the school was reorganized in 1934 on the graduate level and now requires a Bachelor's degree for admission. Although the program is designed for general training in librarianship, students may develop special interests in the fields of college, young peoples' or public libraries. After completion of a one year course these highly-demanded, book-classifists hurry off to fill jobs in libraries scattered far and wide.

College of HOME ECONOMICS

UP on the third floor of Slocum, girls play cateress to each other as they prepare meals. Others tackle clothing construction problems or study fashion trends, and many discuss the utility of household commodities. In eleven sequences of Home Economics, headed by Dean Anne Macleod, 435 girls approach subject matter that is practical from the standpoint of getting jobs or a husband.

School of EDUCATION

SLOCUM houses the School of Education on the second floor where energetic Dean Harry Ganders has his office. Boasting a unique set-up in its all-university program, dual enrollment in twenty-seven departments of the University is offered prospective teachers. Important reason for its success: 150 co-op teachers scattered throughout the state take seniors into their communities for three weeks practice teaching.

College of BUSINESS ADMINISTRATION

POTENTIAL secretaries and future business men throng the halls on the first floor where the College of Business Administration has its home. Sixty-one professors under Dean Charles Raper train 786 men and 274 women in commercial teaching and all aspects of business.

College of APPLIED SCIENCE

AN analytical mind, a technical outlook on life, and a liking for math—these are prerequisites for the efficient wielders of slide rules. Midst the clatter of machine tools, 485 hard-working engineers spend long hours in laboratories and work shops. This practical experience is of invaluable assistance when obtaining jobs after graduation. The subject matter is specialized in one of the following departments: Mechanical, Civil, Electrical, Chemical, or Administrative. Since the summer of 1940 over 3,000 men have been trained in defense courses held each evening.

The ultimate goal of these young men is to wear a Tau Beta Pi key—signifying their membership in the national engineering honorary which confers distinction on students of high scholarship and personal qualifications. Dean Louis Mitchell heads what is reputed to be one of the most difficult colleges on campus—at least by the engineers.

MAXWELL HALL

MAXWELL GRADUATE SCHOOL OF CITIZENSHIP AND PUBLIC AFFAIRS

WILLIAM E. MOSHER
DEAN OF CITIZENSHIP

MAXWELL buzzes with activity continuously — over eighteen hundred students enter and leave its modern classrooms daily. Under the spirited leadership of a faculty well-versed in what's going on in the world today, students study the economic trend of the business cycle or read long assignments in Poli. Sci.

The school itself, headed by Dean William E. Mosher, is designed for graduate students in the school sciences and public administration. It prepares selected men and women for courses in civic administration and community research, for which there is a great need today. Candid discussions and a free give-and-take attitude of the classroom stimulate a spirit of inquiry and research in tomorrow's thinkers.

Undergraduate courses are offered to persons enrolled in many other colleges also, and a large percentage of Syracuse's student body grapples with the problems of government before graduation. The school sponsors the International Relations Club, the Far Eastern Conference, and the Maxwell Forum which bring to students laymen of importance and faculty and student debates. Almost any night in the week you will find a lighted auditorium filled with the interested enjoying a lecture or being gavel-rapped to attention for meetings.

YATES SCHOOL

School of JOURNALISM

Radically revising the organization of the School of Journalism, Dean M. Lyle Spencer early this spring instituted four new departments, graphic arts, business management, advertising, and radio — in addition to the present course in editorial practice. The new plan is far in advance of curricula offered by the country's schools of journalism, which retain the customary emphasis on reporting work.

To complete the details for this program, students in the School of Journalism met for breakfast on two Sunday mornings to suggest revisions in the present set-up and to offer new ideas to use in formulating the new plan.

The school will continue to require another major in the College of Liberal Arts or in the College of Business Administration. Requirement of a "B" average in eight hours of journalism is also maintained for admission to the school.

The journalists scored a scoop this spring when they booked T. A. Raman, Indian journalist, to talk at the Publications banquet at the time of the Cripp's proposal.

Through the courtesy of The Syracuse Post-Standard, the journalists became professional for one day and edited the Monday morning edition on April 27.

GRADUATE SCHOOL

COLLEGE life, with its extra-curricular activities becomes a memory as graduate students lay aside the carefree attitude of undergraduate life to assume more scholarly interests. They are studying advanced courses in every college on the hill in preparation for many specialized jobs. Acting Dean William L. Bray, Professor of Botany, heads the school with an enrollment numbering a thousand. These serious minded leaders of tomorrow hold positions as graduate assistants, and receive degrees which add impressive letters after their respective John Does.

DEAN OF GRADUATES

College of FORESTRY

MEN and more men — 475 of them — attend classes composed entirely of members of their own sex in Bray and Marshall halls. They belong to the boots-and-plaid-shirts league — stalwart young gentlemen who will hold down forestry positions in federal, state, and private agencies upon graduation. The Foresters are provided with a two-fold division of instruction — production and utilization — in the state-owned school. The college, adequately equipped for laboratory work, offers courses in forest botany, pathology, and etymology, silviculture and forest soils, and experimental work in pulp and paper manufacture. Its library contains about 50,000 items covering all phases of forestry and the sciences having a bearing on forestry.

Students have extensive "field" training in the form of a six-week's encampment period during the summer between their junior and senior year.

Top row: S. N. Spring, dean; H. P. Brown, wood technology; N. C. Brown, forest utilization; W. W. Chipman, business manager; L. D. Cox, landscape and recreational management; J. F. Libby, pulp and paper; E. F. McCarthy, silviculture; H. Meier, forest botany; G. A. Whipple, director of extension school.

College of LAW

Paul S. Andrews
DEAN OF LAW

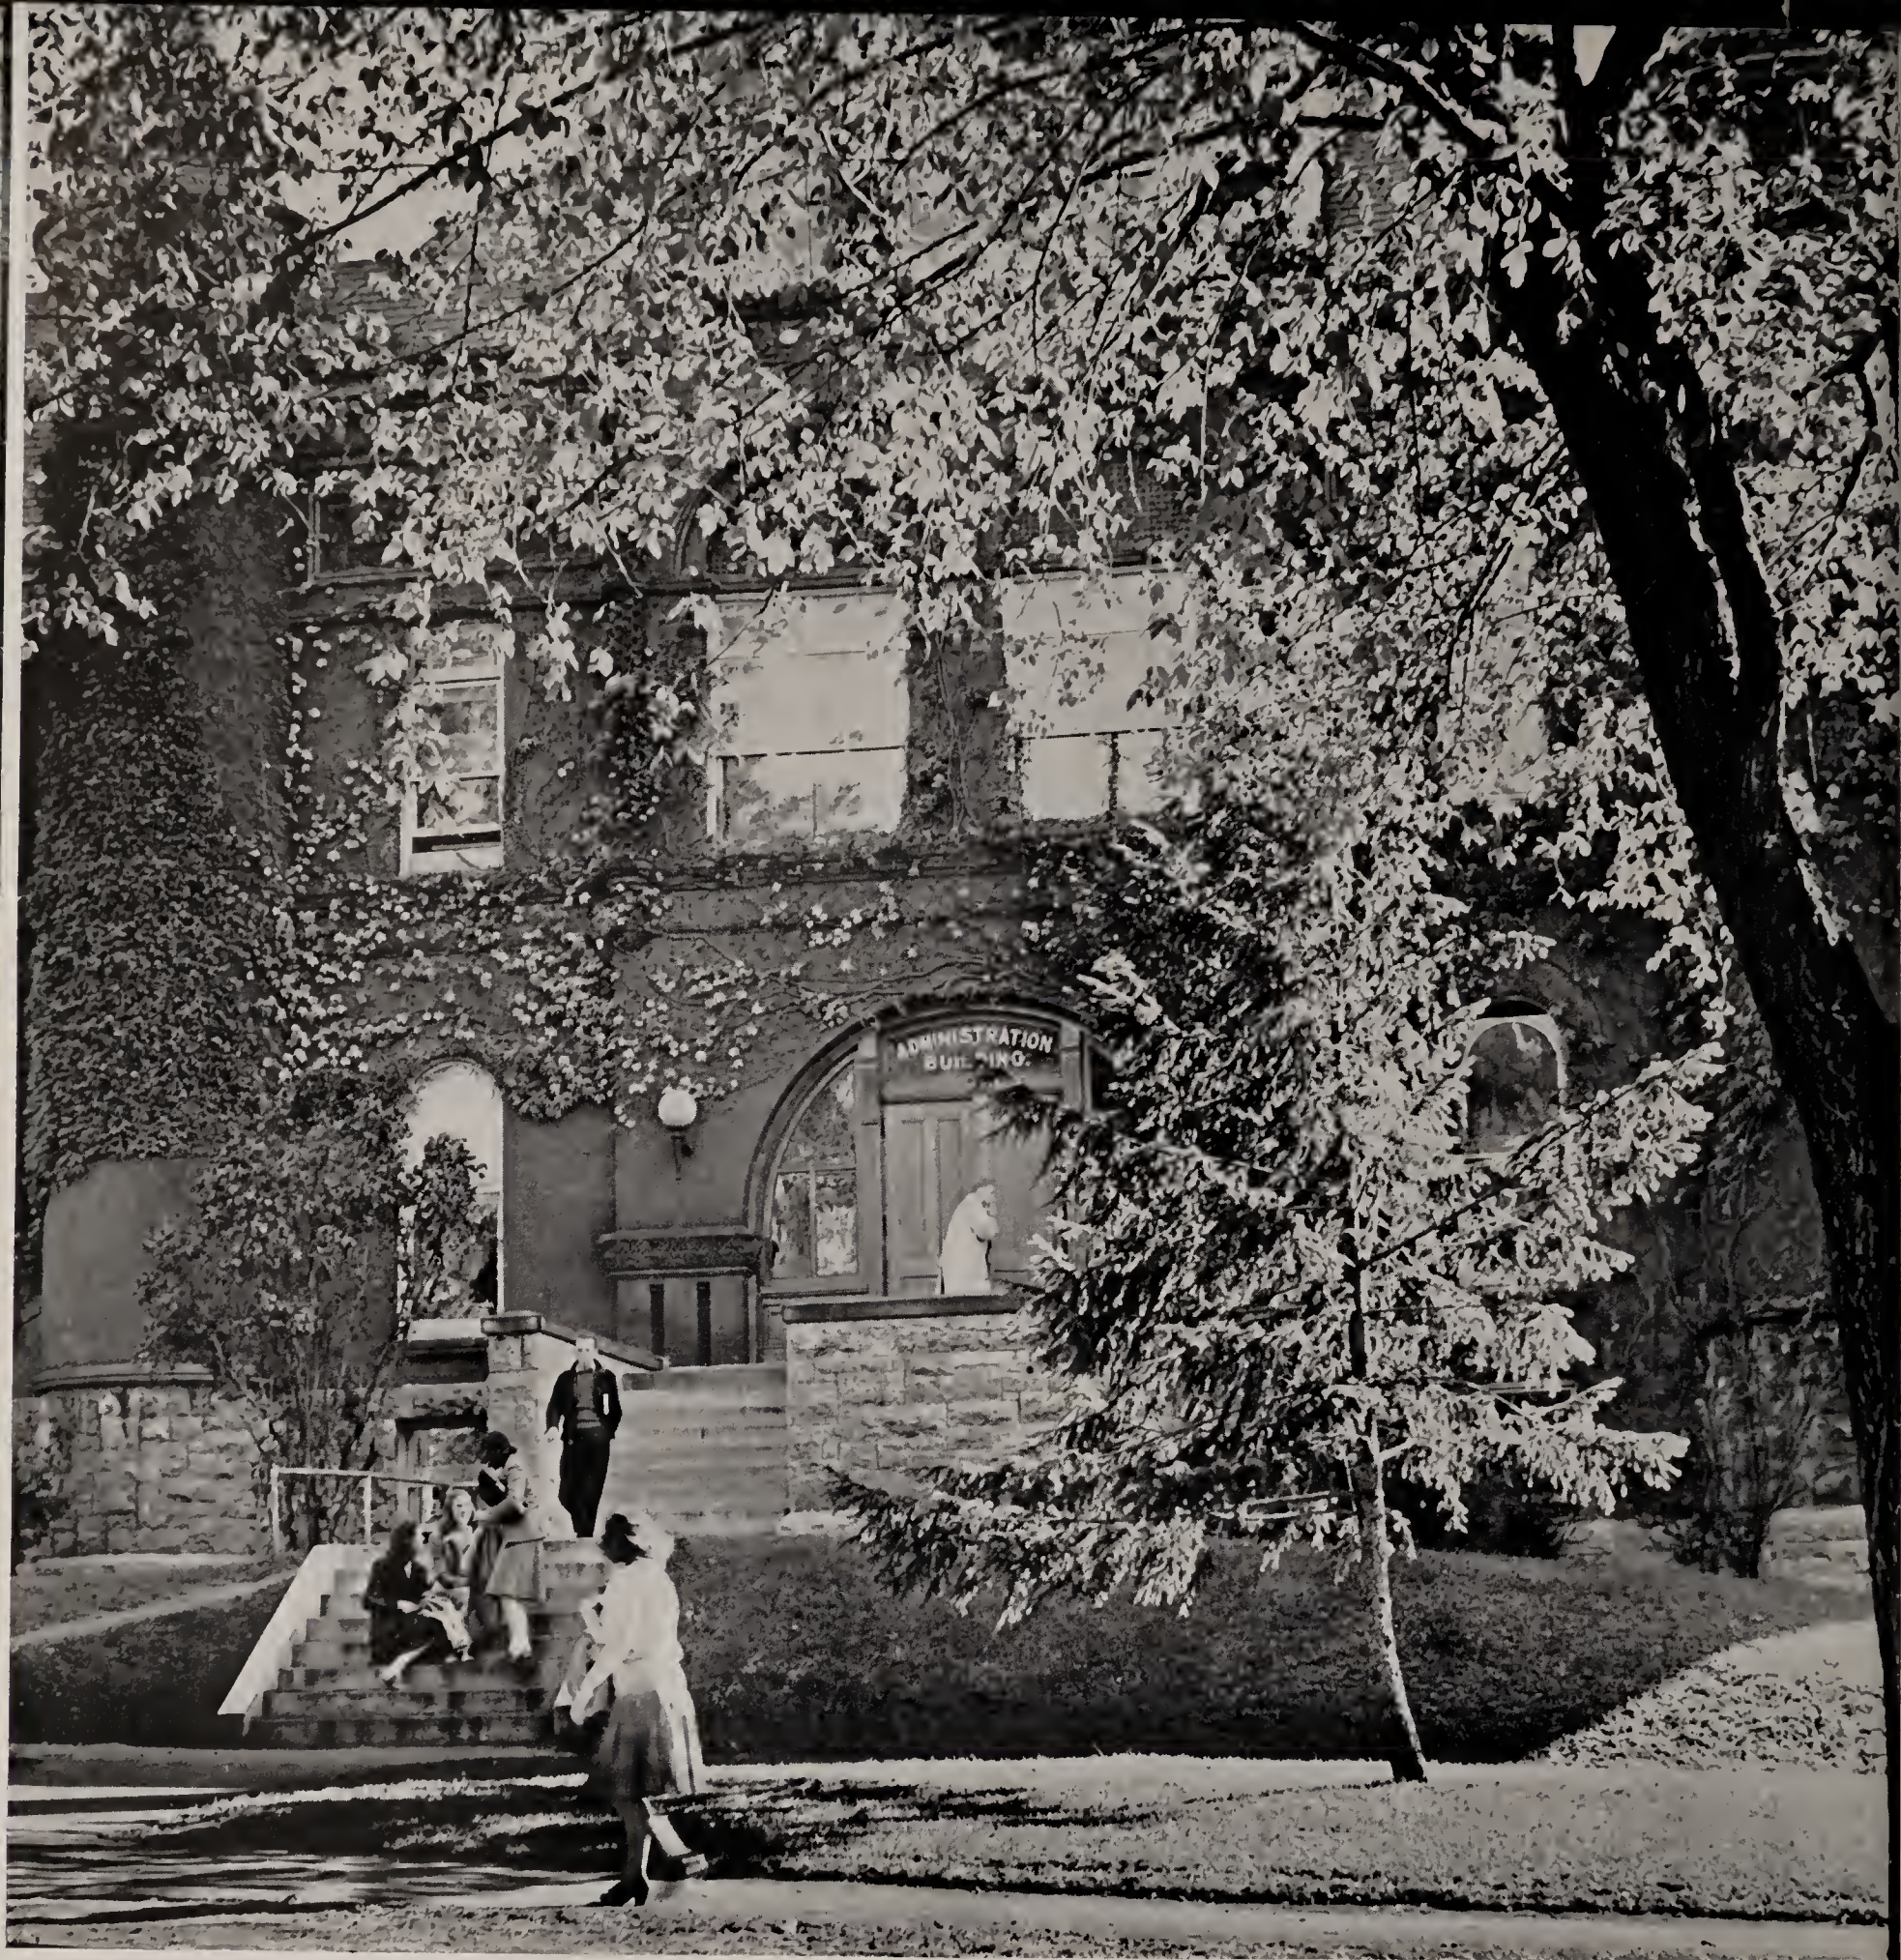

SEVENTY-SEVEN student lawyers seek knowledge of legal reasoning in ancient Hackett Hall in downtown Syracuse. Dean Paul Shipman Andrews and his seven associates guide sober, serious students for three years in their pursuit in all phases of law: legal practice, teaching, public law, corporation law and corporation finance. The programs of study are planned to give the student an acquaintance with the sources of the law, a sound and general knowledge of its ideals and principles as they have developed and are now developing, and a store of legal information as great as he can assimilate in three years of study. He is drilled in the rigid discipline of legal reasoning, in the hope of equipping him, as his interests may lead, for the best type of practice, legal teaching, or research. One of the most valuable features of the college has been the constant process of individual conferences and consultations between faculty and students.

Founded at Syracuse in 1896, the College of Law has produced many eminent lawyers and judges. A Board of Visitors, composed of some of these eminent men, come from all parts of the country to attend Board meetings, plan the future of the school, hear reports on progress, and offer constructive criticisms.

Senior Moot Court is the highlight of the student-lawyer's life. Held in the Appellate Division room in the County Court house before a bench of distinguished lawyers and judges, seniors plead cases in true, dramatic style. Juniors and frosh also boast moot courts held in classrooms. Reward for their efforts — law students may belong to Phi Delta Phi, national legal fraternity, a national, university honor society, and a local society for social and intellectual activities, known as the Louis Marshall Society in honor of the great lawyer and benefactor of this Law College.

DEAN HILTON and her staff are interested listeners and advisors on problems concerning the welfare and happiness of every coed at Syracuse. The housing program for women under the direction of this office is of particular assistance in making available opportunities for student leadership. Adequate social activities and social education programs are carried out for the benefit of the students.

THE Appointment Office, directed by Mrs. William Allis, cooperates with students and employers of students to effect a sound system of work for men and women who propose to work their way through school.

IT is to the Dean of Men's Office that John Jones goes if he has an educational, financial, or vocational problem. Here he finds Dean A. Blair Knapp and his able staff ready to help him solve his difficulties. In cooperation with other administrative offices, they are concerned with the new freshman housing program, placement of graduates, scholarships, finding work for self-supporting students, and even draft registration.

CHANCELLOR

From the Chancellor . . .

ANYONE who examines the file of Year Books in the University Library will be unable to find the Onondagan of the class of 1919. But when this class graduated we were again at peace, trying to put together the pieces of our shattered national life. This task was very difficult. It has never been fully accomplished. But, we learned something by experience and from all responsible leaders comes the cry, "carry on as nearly as possible in normal fashion". Nothing would please our enemies more than to thoroughly disrupt our ways of life and thought. In the days immediately following the outbreak of war, there seemed to be some prospect that fifth column activity would succeed. We became jittery. We jumped this way and that in feverish desire to "do something". Fortunately we now seem to be sobering down and preparing ourselves for the long strong pull ahead. And, I am sure that in this respect also, the Axis powers will fail.

The Onondagan of 1920 is the most interesting of all the series. It contains a long "Honor Roll" and a very long "Service List". But, it tells a very small part of the story of Syracuse University in the First World War. Perhaps the Onondagan of 1944 will tell an even more interesting story. Whatever comes, we know that the University will be proud of its record.

RATIVE OFFICERS

DIRECTOR OF ADMISSIONS

George Van Dyke
TREASURER

Charles L. Raper
VICE-CHANCELLOR

VICE-CHANCELLOR Charles Lee Raper, Dean of Business Administration, is the coordinator of all the deans on the campus. If they have a problem relative to the general policy of the university, the Vice-Chancellor's office sees that the difficulties are handled similarly under one set of rules. Dean Raper also takes over the Chancellor's duties upon his absence, executes campus parking regulations, and assists Dean Knapp in handling all contacts with draft boards and registered men.

The function of the Admissions Office is to select approximately 1900 freshmen from about three times that number of applications. It is an established policy of Syracuse to give first consideration to the children of graduates. Prospective students are selected for their all-round possibilities with considerable emphasis upon the quality of citizenship which the student has displayed in high school. The office, in cooperation with the offices of the various deans, supplies information concerning students recommended for admittance from 1200 different schools over a three-year term.

The Treasurer's Office, of which George E. Van Dyke is the head, handles all of the university's pay roll and takes charge of student fees, tuition, and board and room payments. For the benefit of the student, personal checking accounts may be kept there — tapped only when the student himself fills out a special blank.

TRUSTEES

BY its charter, Syracuse University is under the control of a Board of Trustees comprised of sixty members who are chosen by one of four ways for a term of six years. Twenty-eight alumni trustees are chosen at the National Alumni conference; the five honorary members of the board are the mayor, the governor, the Bishop, the president of the Alumni Association, and the commissioner of education. The remainder of the Board is made up of Methodist trustees selected by the Patronizing Conferences of the Methodist Church, and by delegates at large chosen at the annual conference of trustees.

As members come from all over the country, the meetings of the board are held only twice a year, November and Commencement. Most of the business is, then, of necessity, taken care of by nine Syracuse members of the Board who form the executive committee. Meeting once a month for the college year, they carry out the details and less important, but vital issues of the University. For example, they have made it possible for new students to enter in February, some to graduate in three years, and those called into active duty are now able, on consideration of their past record and hours, to receive their diplomas.

As a part of the Board the executive committee's efficient activities are of the utmost importance to the University. Those in office on the Board itself are: President, H. W. Smith; Vice-Presidents, G. Arents, M. Burdett, C. S. Woolworth; Treasurer, G. VanDyke; and Secretary, Louis Ryan.

VARSITY CLUB

FORMED to stimulate interest and foster high ideals in athletics among the alumni and undergraduates of Syracuse University, the Varsity Club has an active membership of nearly 1000 men. Miss May Crandon, executive manager, is fond of "her boys", among them being the stars of years gone by as well as present-day coaches and athletes.

The activities of the club got under way this year with a benefit supper for coaches Carr and Simmons. During the fall a monthly luncheon was served at the Chamber of Commerce after which moving pictures of Syracuse football games were shown. Outstanding in importance was the Home-coming dinner in October and the Block S banquet in March.

The Varsity Club News, official publication of the club, is sent out quarterly. Officers are: Pres., Grant Lewis; Sec., Hyman Kopp; Treas., H. D. Anderson; Ex. Mgr., May Crandon.

ALUMNI OFFICE

GRADUATES of Syracuse need never wonder about what their classmates of years gone by are doing, nor do they lack information regarding campus activities — thanks to the efforts of the Alumni Association. J. Winifred Hughes, executive secretary, counselor, and chief correspondent to interested alums, is the editor of the Alumni Association's official publication, Alumni News. During the year the Association sponsored during Home-coming Weekend in October when alumni from near and far attended a luncheon, football game, and open houses on campus; it assists the University in its Sub-freshman day program, and in February holds the annual Alumni ball. On Alumni Day in June reunions of former graduates are featured with a luncheon and college association meetings. During the year voluntary contributions of members are received by Charles Lee, Jr. and go to make up the Alumni Fund. Throughout the country there are eighty-two local branches — concrete evidence that Syracuse alumni form a loyal and enterprising group.

MEN'S STUDENT GOVERNMENT

MEN'S Student Government affects every man on the Syracuse campus through his right to vote in elections and express his opinions on affairs pertaining to campus activities at meetings.

The Assembly got under way this year with the passage of a new election bill, and, in co-operation with WSS, carried out plans for inexpensive dances open to all students. The prize feat of the year was the success of the "Victory Corsage" program for all Christmas formals. MSG netted the tidy sum of $703 for defense only eleven days after war was declared. A defense council was organized which registered all men to contribute their services to campus defense projects. Upon the shoulders of Bill Schoonmaker rest the executive duties.

Working in coordination with MSG, the Civil Service is the administrative branch. Its non-political service entails keeping records of men's student activities and the rules and regulations passed by the assembly, assisting the executive in the administration of laws, and conducting elections. In the field of research, it collects data from other schools on the conduct of elections, cooperation between men and women's governments, honor systems, and also all available information about the many organizations on this campus. The Civil Service chief, Bob Root, is a member of the MSG cabinet—an advisory group to the president made up of the leaders of the Assembly.

UPPER HOUSE OF SENATE

WOMEN'S STUDENT SENATE

SYRACUSE women make their own rules, elect their presiding officers, and "campus" themselves through Women's Student Senate. Assembly activities, under the authority of a governing board, covered a large field this year. In September, the girls ran convocations for freshman women, conducted campus tours, and distributed their own edition of a freshman handbook — a busy frosh week. A new ruling was passed by referendum giving Junior Guides eligibility for president of Lower House. With the war came the big undertaking of all defense activities for women. Over 1000 students enrolled in twelve training courses and thirty-one volunteer services, doing everything from rolling bandages to taking apart automobiles.

Women are summoned to the Senate office for penalties of all kinds, the officers determining the severity of punishment for everything from staying until the end of movies to missing the train back to school. Lucille James, president of Senate, leads an active life as the official representative of undergraduate women at Syracuse.

DAILY CHAPEL LEADER

HENDRICKS CHAPEL

UNDER the guidance of William H. Powers, kindly Dean of Chapel, Syracuse students have made their Chapel organization one of the most serviceable and oft-functioning units on the campus. They participate in the regular Sunday morning services and short daily chapel programs, and do active committee work throughout the year.

This year saw the largest attendance at the Chapel-sponsored freshman camps since their inception: one hundred and twenty women enjoyed three days of recreation and orientation at Bradley Brook reservoir, while 215 men commuted daily between Sims Hall and Green Lake to carry out a program of sports and fun.

One thousand two hundred students were enrolled on thirteen varied committees. Social service committee members dealt with serving the community, the worship committee planned special weeks for Chapel services, and those interested in world relations contacted foreign students and refugees. One of the highlights of the year was the annual Christmas pageant in which 70 students depicted the beautiful Christmas story.

Sponsored by the special programs committee, the Hendricks Chapel lecture series brought five outstanding speakers to campus, namely: T. R. Ybarra, John T. Whitaker, Richard Lahey, Hallet Abend, and Andre Maurois. Warren Bartholomew and Barbara Hopkins head the Men and Women's Chapel associations respectively.

argument took place . . . Cornell won 6-0, but Hill rooters kept repeating "if Berthold only ran straight and if Maines's lateral on his punt return in the waning seconds had not been ruled a forward, etc." somehow the cokes (please note WSS) in Zincks and the Dutch Kitchen tasted almost as good as they would have if we had won . . .

The Daily Orange Football Forum started its second year, October 8, as Solem explained his Y formation, the buck lateral and other grid complexities to the college public . . . Jesse Kaplan received the biggest political plum of the year when he was appointed senior ball chairman . . . On the tenth Phi Kappa Alpha presented a new University flag to the Chancellor, and the Daily Orange started a feud with the Interfraternity Council . . . at their first convocation Crosset and Crabtree went to town for the Seniors . . . Crabtree repeated that night in "My Dear Children," his first hit of the year.

Homecoming weekend was definitely a success as Dick Weber blocked a Holy Cross punt in the last two minutes, and Dick Ransom fell on it in the end zone for a 6-0 victory . . . Bob Johnston, Post-Standard photographer, snapped Weber's blocking of the kick and it was hailed as the football picture of the year.

The coeds finally had their day, October 15, and pledged 283 "neat kids" . . . new quota system played havoc with some of the bigger houses and the city girls . . . all was forgotten though as thoughts turned to New York City and NYU . . . few of the many making the trek saw the Violets succumb 31-0 to Ossie's Y formation, but all agreed "much, much fun was had."

Keith Kennedy finally told us that the fall enrollment had only slumped 5.7% . . . the flour rush — long a tradition on Piety Hill — met its death the morning of the Rutgers game as one of the sophs was injured, but not as seriously as was at first believed . . . that same morning started bragging again . . .

. . . dressed up for the rushees

. . . wanted to do this more often

... went pep-festing ...

... were interested in frosh politics ...

NYU's Leslie Mitchell performed what was probably the outstanding athletic feat in Central New York this year — running over a slippery Drumlins course in record-breaking time, he received the James E. Sullivan award as the outstanding amateur athlete in the country.

George Sisson was elected speaker of an impotent MSG just before Syracuse travelled to Wisconsin and turned in a miraculous 27-20 victory . . . Isy Basye's brother Paul was elected frosh president in an election which was highlighted by the "Orange Party Dispute" . . . the Civil Service office stepped in before the election and turned thumbs down on that party's candidates.

... just before Weber blocked that kick ...

... paid our tribute to Sawyer Falk with Boar's Head and T. and B.

Furor reigned when 38 of Maxwell's finest told the 1A's they should start fighting right away . . . the students were dead against it . . . Penn State put the quietus on any hopes for a Bowl Bid with a 34-19 victory . . . the Corner Store, having stood for an awful lot all these years finally bit the dust as a flaming fire ruined its three stories . . . balloting in Esquire's best-dressed man contest was moved into the street and Dick Fellows won with Ralph Crear the runner-up and Gene Hopkins third . . .

... know they're not looking at clothes.
but clothes made them what they are . . .

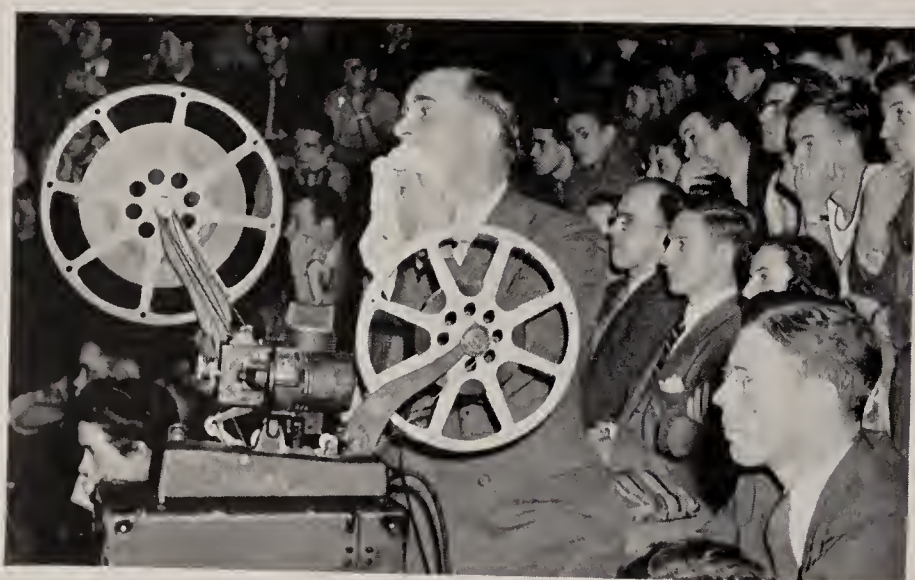

... listened to Penn State show us how . . .

. . . thankful that next year it'll be a tug of war . . .

. . . attended every movie of Saturday's performance . . .

An almost capacity crowd watched the 19-19 Colgate tie, November 15, as Bunky Morris's 76-yard punt return in the last 40 seconds and Red McPhail's conversion provided the tying points, and one of the most fitting climaxes in the long rivalry.

Suddenly the students awoke to their real purpose for being on the hill when they were confronted with mid-semester exams . . . and the lights burned far into the night as the highlights of the fall were crowded out of their heads while lecture notes and readings were crammed in.

. . . put our faith in absorption by osmosis.

Syracuse Coeds

INDEPENDENT WOMEN'S ASSOCIATION

THE independent women of Syracuse received a feather in their cap when Margaret Rogers, comely independent of the class of '43, walked off with the Winter Carnival Queenship. That victory was a definite sign that these girls have formed a functioning body within themselves—a group organization which will be of great importance to every independent coed.

The Independent Women's Association has seen only two birthdays and has been somewhat hampered in its attempt to get started. This year, however, the association has extended its hand to all independent coeds in an effort to build up an active membership. They responded by turning out in great numbers for the first massmeeting in the fall and attending the monthly meetings which are usually held in Dean Hilton's home.

The biggest item on the year's calendar was the revision of the constitution which gives every independent woman an active membership in the organization. In the spring reception in the Chancellor's home, Mrs. Graham presented a key to the independent girl who maintained the highest average in her class for the preceding semester.

The council, headed by Priscilla Blake, is made up of ten upperclass women. Advised by Jean Templeton, they are the promoters of the association's three aims—to increase social contacts, raise scholastic standing and encourage participation in activities of independent coeds.

First Row: J. Walpole, W. Brown, J. Templeton, faculty adviser, P. Blake, S. Richardson. Second Row: I. Miller, H. Miller, R. Lamont, J. Best, D. Windels, M. Arison.

PANHELLENIC COUNCIL

PROSPECTIVE sorority women trudge up the steps of the Ad building during the first week of school to pay their two-dollar rushing fee. They attend open houses, costume parties and formals under the auspices of Panhellenic which makes the rushing rules. This organization, composed of representatives from each sorority on campus, strives to establish closer friendship and cooperation among sororities and to maintain a uniform system of rushing which will be fair to all houses.

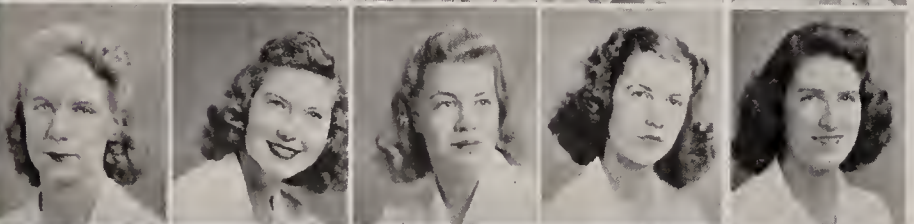

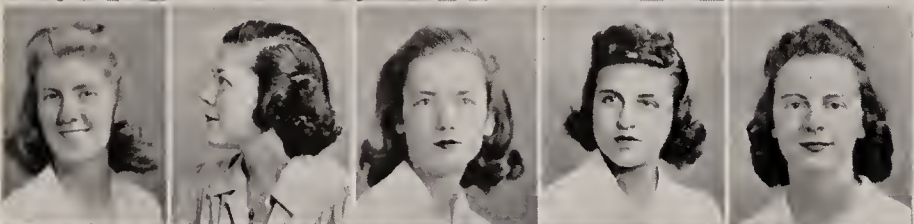

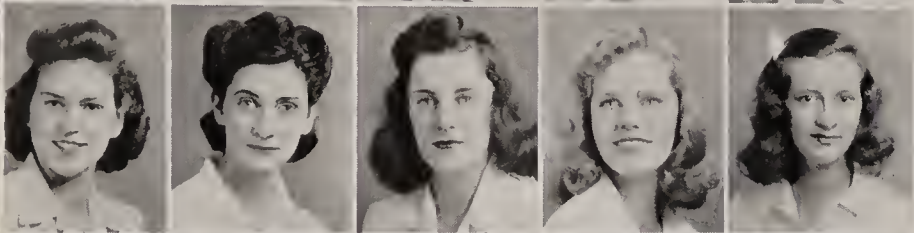

The Panhellenic "Blue Book," the annual publication containing rules governing rushing, pledging, and initiation, underwent a "re-vamping" stage in an effort to further help the rushee and the sorority girl. The biggest point of discussion this year was the quota system, which went into effect in January, limiting each house membership to a total of fifty-five.

On March 14, 1000 women from the twenty-one sororities on campus, bedecked in dinner gowns and their best perfumes, enjoyed the yearly banquet given at the Hotel Syracuse. Miss Pearl Green, speaker, discussed the coed's obligation to herself and to the university. Chi Omega sorority won the skit award, while Alpha Epsilon Phi claimed top honors in scholarship.

To avoid partisanship, the officers of the association are selected automatically, each sorority taking its turn according to the order of its founding here. Priscilla Stewart was president this year.

Syracuse Men

INTERFRATERNITY COUNCIL

NEARLY 1000 fraternity men at Syracuse are conded together as brother Greeks by the Interfraternity Council — a representative body that acts as a clearing house for the many fraternal problems that come up during the year.

Interfraternity weekend, the festive three day affair started last year, changed its place on the Syracuse social calendar from March to December. The Greeks danced to the sweet swing of Sonny Dunham's orchestra or chatted in their fraternity booths at the Friday night Ball. They entertained their girl friends and fellow fraternity men at open houses Saturday afternoon, and that night trooped to the gay production of "Piety Hill Billy" given by Boar's Head at the Civic. Sunday morning they were inveigled out of bed by a Chapel service which brought to a finish their weekend.

In March all fraternity men enjoyed a repast at the Interfraternity Banquet where scholarship and individual awards were presented. Psi Upsilon came out on top in the song contest, as the sweetest serenaders on campus. Dr. C. Grove Haines, prominent historian of the University, discussed the European situation as it affects student life.

Loren Schoff heads the council of fifty men who carry out the rushing rules, conduct a mass meeting for freshmen, edit a freshmen handbook, and figure out ways for fraternities to economize. Advised by Professor Lewis Crawford, the council is a member of the National Interfraternity Conference.

UNDER the new freshman housing program instigated by the Dean of Men's Office, twenty orientation houses have been provided for first year men. In an effort to instill good studying habits in the newcomers and help them realize the value of making a good start, the administration enforces compulsory study hours from seven-thirty 'til ten-thirty Monday through Thursday evenings.

Here, under the supervision and guidance of an experienced counselor, the wearers of the orange lids set up their house rules and elect their officers. The president of each house, which contains anywhere from eighteen to thirty-three men, not only heads his particular residence in students authority, but is a representative on the Men's Living Center council. This group meets once a month to discuss problems relative to the housing situations, assist in personal difficulties, and set up committees to coordinate group projects.

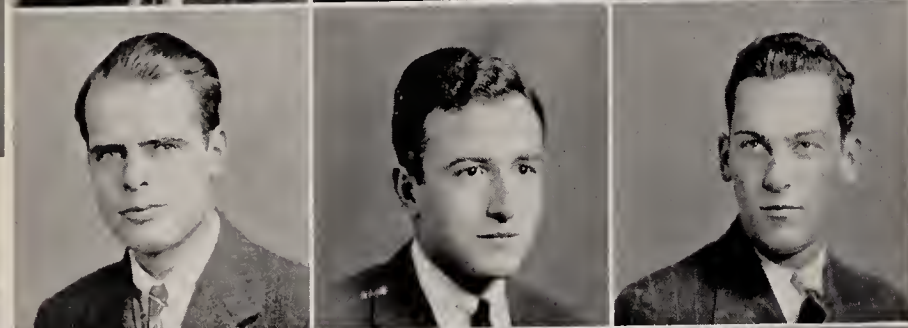

The chairman of the resident advisors, Frank Piskor, advises the council in its activities, assists in any personnel work which presents itself, and helps the boys to become acquainted with Syracuse traditions and regulations. It is believed that this new housing program will help to relieve many of the stresses and the strains of the first year and will enable freshman men to start out at Syracuse with a bang. After that—they're on their own!

Colgate Game — Football Season Ends.

F O O T B A L L

STUNNING the intercollegiate football world with his famed "Y-Formation" featuring the wrong-way center, Coach Ossie Solem directed the Orange gridders through a successful fall campaign, winning five, losing two, and completing the season in a hair-raising 19-19 deadlock with Colgate's Red Raiders.

The backwards pivot, however, is now history. Led by Walter E. Okeson, the National Rules Committee hopped on the Orange innovation — outlawing it in the only major rules change for next year.

The college football careers of 15 Hill pigskinners — six of whom were regulars — ended with the traditional Colgate battle. The following Orangemen will don the cap and gown in June and never again be seen playing for Syracuse: ends, Red McPhail, Les Dye, and Gene Berger; tackles, Captain Tom Kinney and Bill Mozur; guards, Dick Fellows, Ernie Ascherman, and Frank Mazejko; centers, Ken Bechner and Ken Chapman; and backs, Ray Tice, Gerry Courtney, Bob Heald, Ralph Cordisco, and Leo Canale.

Tice went through four years of college football, his name unsung, his deeds unnoticed. Besides having played almost every position on the team — tackle, guard, center, and quarterback — the one-man football team is the only Syracuse player to perform in every game in his three years with the varsity.

When all Orange signal-callers of the previous year graduated, the first person Solem picked out to handle the quarterback assignment was versatile Ray, who switched quickly from a tackle slot into the backfield.

The reversed center was built around the rugged, hard-hitting snapper-back, Ken Bechner. His ability to flip the ball accurately to the Orange backs, pull out of the line and lead the interference, made him a vital cog in the operation of the Y.

Fellows, along with his running mate, Captain-elect Dick Weber, formed a guard combination that made all opposing teams think twice before bucking through center. Well versed in the art of cross-checking, Fellows and Weber practically uprooted all rival lineman.

In the meantime, Captain Tom Kinney, an outstanding 60-minute performer, paired with Dick Ransom, a junior, to fill the tackle posts.

Courtney and Heald were two top-flight backfield men. Although for the greater part of the season he remained Tommy Maines' understudy, Courtney was one of Syracuse's leading ground-gainers, rolling up an average of 8.5 yards per try as a season total. Heald reached the apex of his grid career in the Wisconsin game, when he pounded through the Badger line in a 47-yard touchdown romp.

McPhail's ability as a high-stepping pass-snatcher was overshadowed only by his place-kicking — the Big Red coming through for most of the points-after-touchdowns.

It was little Bunky Morris, redheaded halfback star, who sparked the Orangemen in most of their games. Bunky was high-scorer for the year with 39 points, followed by Courtney with 30, and McPhail with 23. The other scorers were: Whitesell, 18; Watt, 12; Berthold, 12; Heald, 12; Maines, 6; Mirabito, 6; Michael 6; Dye 6; Earley, 6; and Close, 6.

In season statistics, Syracuse amassed a total of 2065 yards by rushing to 752 for opponents. The Orange eleven accumulated exactly 100 first downs to 66 for opposition. Syracuse gained 513 yards by passing to 433 for opponents.

Ossie Solem's gridmen more than doubled the total offensive yardage made by opposition. The figures are 2,564 to 1,185 — which give quite an eyeful as to the power of the Y formation.

Little skat-back Morris handled most of the punting chores through the year, consistently booting 50 and 60-yard spirals deep into the coffin corner.

With Syracuse trailing 19-12 in the dying seconds of the Colgate clash, Morris took a punt from Al Hanover on his own 27, side-stepped three Raiders and moved down the sideline with only Hanover remaining between him and the goal. Fullback Toots Mirabito charged through to flatten the Maroon back and insure the pay-dirt run by Morris.

COACH OSSIE SOLEM

In his five years as coach of Orange gridiron fortunes, Ossie has licked the Colgate jinx, and succeeded in topping the Raiders in two of five football battles and tying this year, 19-19.

Bunky Morris, Syracuse's smallest player, won high scoring honors for the year by tallying 39 points.

It's a fumble! Despite this miscue by Tom Maines, (below) Syracuse defeated Wisconsin, 27-20.

SYRACUSE, CLARKSON,

THE 1941 edition of Ossie Solem's Orangemen swamped Clarkson Tech, 39-0, in its unveiling under the flood lights of Archbold stadium.

The score was the highest to be rolled up against a Tech team by Syracuse in eight years of competition. The Orange team ran wild against the Engineers, but the player who sent chills up the spines of the 15,000 spectators was Bunky Morris.

Bunky booted two field goals in the battle, one coming in the closing minutes of the first half from 15 yards out, and the other in the fourth period from the 38-yard line.

Syracuse rang up 20 first downs, while gaining a total of 469 yards. Clarkson failed to make a first down.

The first touchdown of the season was carried across by Joe Watt late in the first period. In the second quarter Gerry Courtney and Dick White-sell each scored once.

Joe Watt bucked over for the fourth touchdown in the first two minutes of the second half.

SYRACUSE, CORNELL,

THE Orange football forces journeyed to Ithaca for their first major encounter of the year, caused a furor with their new Y formation and reversed center, garnered more first downs and gained more yardage than Cornell, but returned to Syracuse with a loss on their record.

The Hillmen met Kenny Stofer, Big Red junior half-back, who passed, kicked, and carried the Cornell colors to a 6-0 triumph.

One quick thrust in the early minutes of the second period furnished the margin of victory. Stofer stepped back to his own 40 for a delayed forward pass and fired a long one to Red Johnson who caught the ball on the 10 and was tackled by Eddie Fox on the six. Then the versatile Stofer charged across the goal line and the game was won.

Syracuse's best opportunity came in the second stanza. Wingback Joe Watt dropped back to his 40 and heaved a long pass which end Paul Berthold gathered in on the Cornell 20 and scampered to the six before being downed. It was an exact duplicate of the earlier Cornell pre-touchdown play, but an intercepted pass quelled the Orange uprising.

SYRACUSE, 6 SYRACUSE, 31 SYRACUSE, 49
HOLY CROSS, 0 NEW YORK U., 0 RUTGERS, 7

RESUMING a rivalry that had lapsed for 21 years, the Orange gained its second victory of the year before a huge homecoming crowd when they vanquished a previously undefeated Holy Cross eleven, 6-0, on a blocked kick by guard Dick Weber, two minutes before the final whistle.

A game Crusader team checked a 64-yard Syracuse drive with a goal line stand and took possession of the ball on downs. With a possible scoreless tie in view instead of a defeat, Holy Cross substituted Dick Gibson, who went back into the end zone to kick his team out of danger.

Dick Weber, Hill right guard and spark of the Orange line, broke through the Crusader line and blocked the kick. Dick Ransom, playing right tackle, fell on the ball for a touchdown, the game, and a major Orange victory. Red McPhail's try for the extra point was wide.

NEW YORK University's withering Violets were plucked by Ossie Solem's Y-minded Orange footballers petal by petal, and when the final whistle had blown, so had the Violets — 31-0.

Ten thousand isolated fans watched the game from the vast, open spaces of Yankee Stadium, and many of these spectators were Syracusans.

Except for the first period, it was the Orange all of the way. Syracuse's opening score came after five minutes in the second period, when Dick Whitesell flipped a pass to Paul Berthold, racing over from 15 yards out.

The second touchdown was scored on another Whitesell pass, thrown from NYU's 5-yard line, to Gerry Courtney. Red McPhail made the score 14-0.

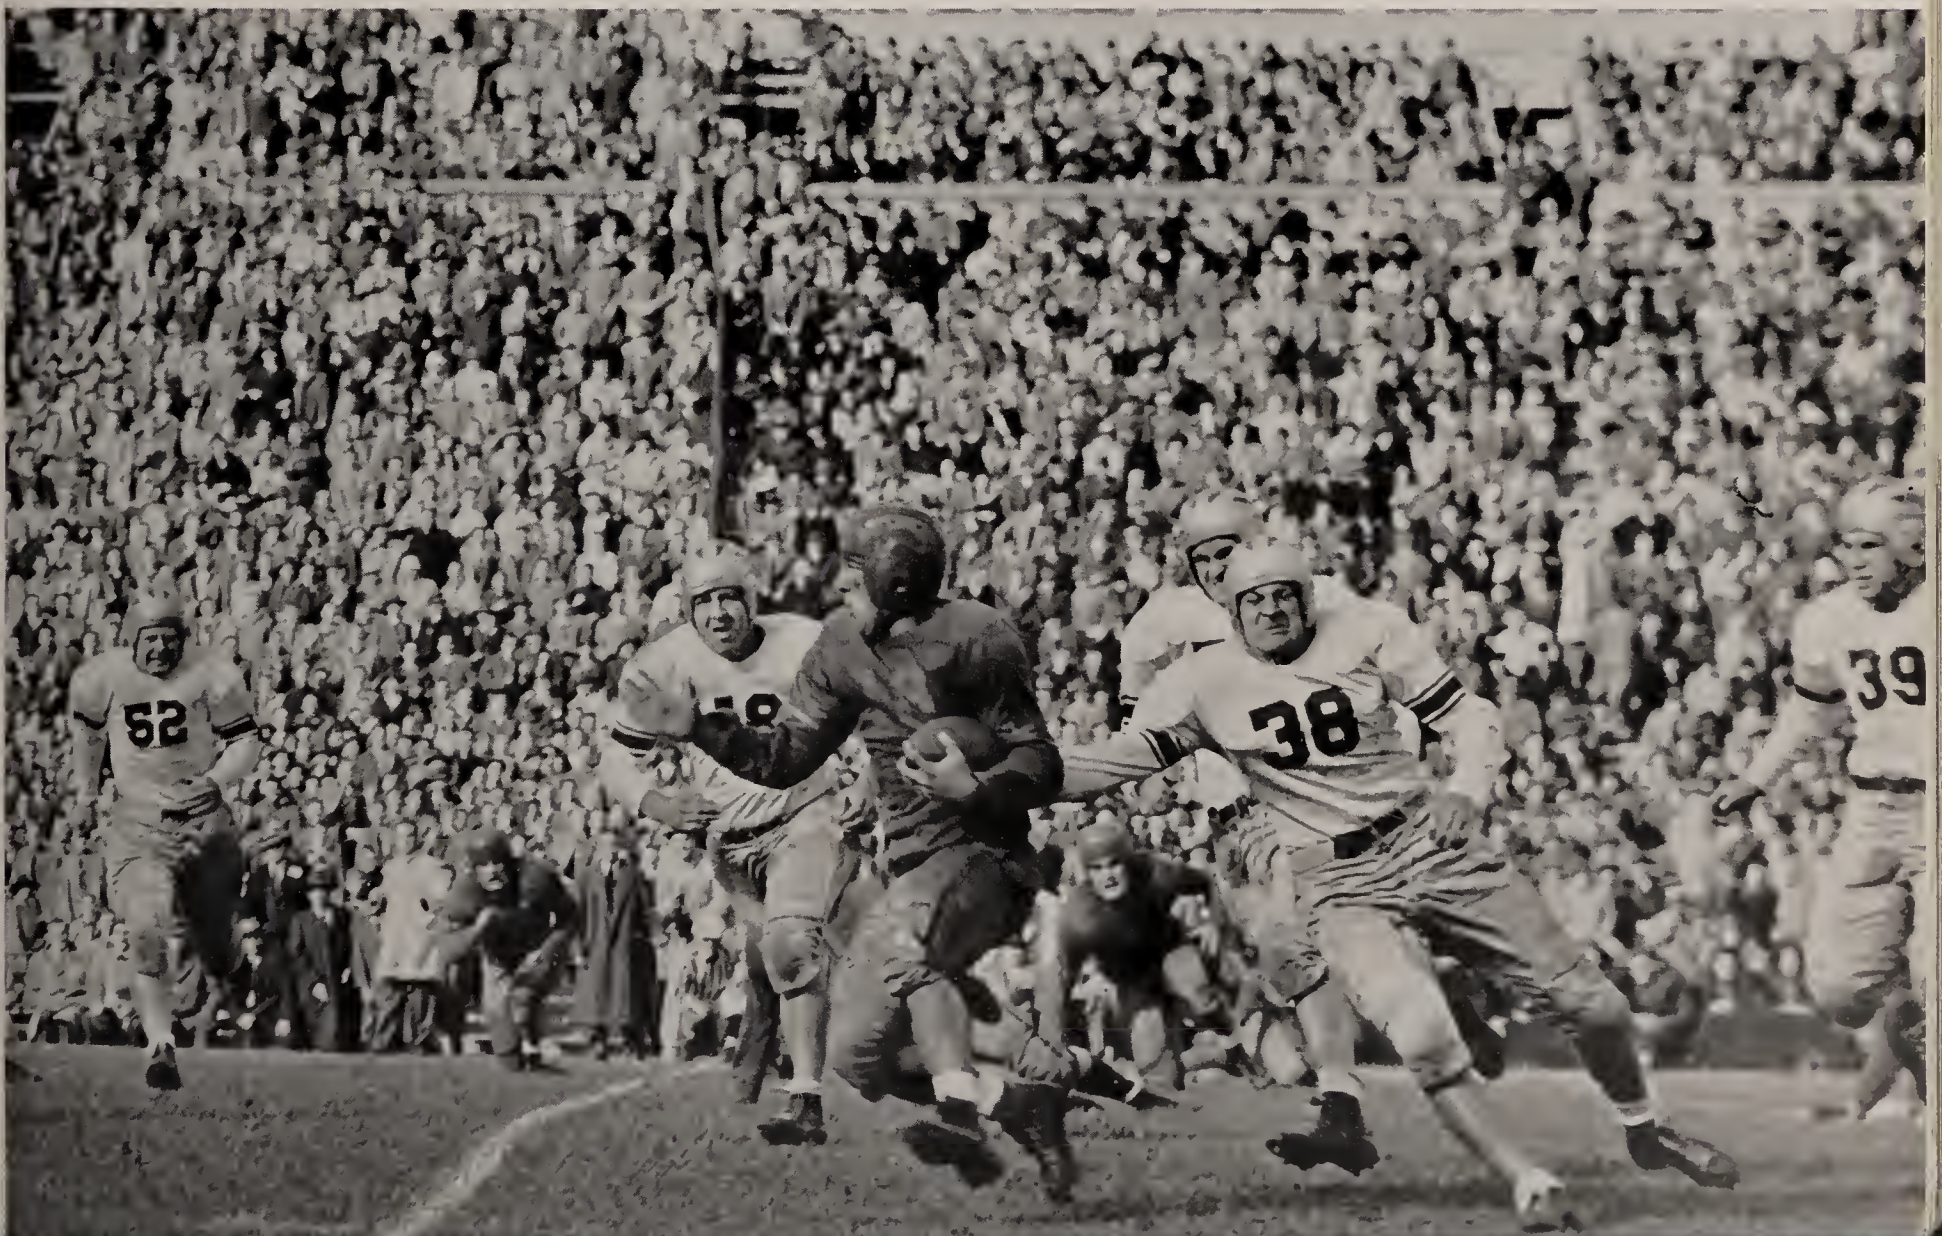

Bunky Morris booted a 20-yard field goal for 3 more points before the half ended. The third period was scoreless.

COMPLETLY outplaying an undefeated foe, Syracuse's highly touted offensive attack, led by Bunky Morris, Gerry Courtney, and Joe Watt, swamped a Rutgers eleven, 49-7, as Coach Ossie Solem found it hard to put a team on the field that could not score against the over-rated New Jersey gridders.

The Orange showed deception and speed as it romped to its fourth victory, scoring two touchdowns and a safety in the first quarter, one goal in the second and four in the third. Charles "Red" McPhail scored five extra points out of seven attempts.

Bunky Morris romped for the first score after a Rutgers' fumble on the kick-off. McPhail followed with a sensational 40-yard run for the second score. The Orange netted two points on a safety after Morris kicked 60 yards to the Scarlet 1-yard stripe.

SYRACUSE, 27 WISCONSIN, 20

FLASHING the most colorful offense Camp Randall stadium had ever witnessed, the Orange eleven ran rings around the Wisconsin Badgers at Madison, Wis., to chalk up a 27-20 victory in one of the day's most stunning upsets.

Wisconsin drew first blood by ringing up a touchdown in the first 80 seconds of play, but the Hillmen then pulled the strings off their bag of tricks and began clicking for long gains.

Bob Heald, who covered himself with glory playing the best game of his collegiate career, sneaked through the Badger secondary for the first Piety score, and Bunky Morris tallied next on a 29-yard gallop. The third Saltine score came on a plunge by Heald, and the final touchdown came on a triple lateral play with Tommy Maines scampering over the last chalk mark.

PENN STATE, 34

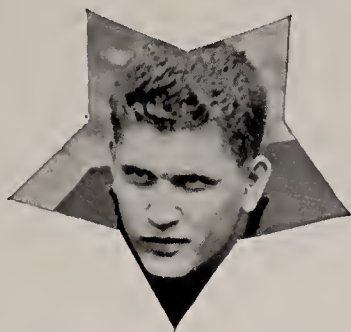

ONCE upon a time Syracuse was going to play in a bowl. Following the sensational victory over Wisconsin, many of the nation's sports writers, including Grantland Rice, had conceded at least an Orange bowl bid to the high-flying Syracuseans.

But that was before a troupe of roaring Nittany Lions clawed the bottom out of Ossie Solem's Y, leaving the Orange mentor holding a mere Penn State V. The score was 34-19. Sixteen thousand jammed Beaver field at State College, Pa., to watch the air-minded Lions roll up a 27-0 lead at the half.

Gerry Courtney slipped off tackle in the third period and galloped 75 yards for the first Syracuse score. After the Pennsylvanians scored again to keep the margin 34-7, Syracuse again tallied to keep the Orange hopes still blazing.

COLGATE, 19

THE Colgate-Syracuse game of 1941 was one of the most exciting and thrill-packed contests in the history of the ancient rivalry. Colgate put on the field an array of fast, deceptive, and able backs that swept the ends constantly and raised havoc with the Syracuse line.

On the Syracuse side, Bunky Morris's punting ability was a life-saver, and the all around playing of Paul Berthold, Gerry Courtney, and Norm Michaels — until he was injured in the second quarter — was great.

In the matter of statistics, it was Colgate all of the way. They smashed the line for 15 first downs against Syracuse's five. Colgate gained a net total of 255 yards against the Orangemen's 125 yards.

Indian Bill Geyer proved to be Colgate's star threat, scoring one touchdown and coggng the speedy Raider offensive. The ablest Colgate play was the "naked reverse," with Injun Bill in the role of the galloping mailman.

The Y formation, used by Syracuse to crumble mighty Wisconsin, bogged down in a muddle of Colgate linesmen, who broke through time and again to break up Orange plays.

It was Andy Kerr's 13th season as chief of the Chenango Raiders, but the big jinx of the year for the famed Colgate grid boss proved to be a little fellow named Bunky Morris. It all happened when Bunky slipped into Canny Andy's right patched pocket and came out with a football game.

There were just 51 seconds left to play, and Colgate was topping the Orangemen by seven points. Kerr had already salted the game away. His players were merely out there killing time. Andy was already being patted on the back. Then it happened, hitting the 33,000 fans that jammed into Archbold's stands like a thunderbolt.

Bunky took a punt from Colgate kicker Jules Yakapovich on his own 24, and twisting and turning, found Syracuse's Burma road to the Colgate goal line. The stadium was breathless as Red McPhail stepped back to send the tying point flying across the Raider goal posts. Final score —

The first Orange score came in the first period when Norm Michaels bucked over from the 4, after galloping 58 yards from Syracuse's 37 to set up the touchdown play.

Gerry Courtney swept right end for four yards late in the second quarter to score the second tally.

Norm Michael, Syracuse sophomore, breaks loose for 54 yards in the first quarter of the Colgate game. Michael scored two plays later from the 2-foot marker.

SOCCER

AMIDST the joy of completing another winning season, a sad note was sounded for Coach Art Horrocks and his soccer team as he was confronted with the loss of six regulars, through commencement, from his 1942 squad.

Captain Tommy Boggs, fullback and letterman for two years, headed the list of seniors on this year's team, followed by George Dennis, star center half, Neil Samson, forward, and Matt Rotelli, center forward. The other two Horrocksmen to leave are lanky Russ Stickney, right wing, and Bud Fritzsche, left half.

The booters opened their season against a strong Army combine and the Kaydets inflicted a 4-1 defeat on the Orange. Matt Rotelli scored the lone goal for the Hill team.

Fred Brightman, 1942 captain, finished the season with high scoring honors as he tallied his sixth goal in the final game of the season with Rochester. He scored the lone goal of the game in the second period on a pass from Bobby Masterson. The victory gave the Horrocksmen a winning season as they finished with four wins, two defeats, and one tie. It was the seventh successive time the Orange defeated the Yellowjackets.

CROSS-COUNTRY

TOM KEANE'S spectacular senior running twins, Captain Wes Stansbury and Lynn Radcliffe, led the varsity harriers to victories over Cornell and Colgate during the dual meet season and climaxed the fall campaign by placing sixth in the annual IC4A jaunt through Van Cortlandt park in New York city.

In the first meet of the year, Penn State's evenly-balanced combine trotted in for a five-way deadlock for third place behind the flying heels of Radcliffe and Stansbury. The Nit-tany runners were victorious, 25-30.

Les MacMitchell, national champion for three years, chipped 40 seconds from the Syracuse course record by leading his NYU Violets to a 25-30 victory over the Orange harriers in the best race of the season.

The Hillmen bounced back against the previously-unbeaten Cornell team and scored their first win of the season at Ithaca, 23-32.

It was in this meet, won by Radcliffe and Stansbury, that the value of the supporting cast of Orangemen came to light. Dick Arrighi, Verne Rockcastle, Ken Norton, Joe Coffin, Clyde Johnson, and Red Tierney all ran their best races of the year.

The final encounter found the Piety Hillers romping away from Colgate on the Drumlins route, 20-35.

FRESH FOOTBALL

EIGHTY ambitious gridders answered Coach Ribs Bayswinger's first call for yearling football candidates, and after weeks of gruelling fundamental drills, the squad was divided into A and B teams.

Cornell invaded Archbold stadium for the opening classic and scalped the Saltine cubs to the tune of 13-6. The lone Orange score came on a plunge from the one-yard line by fullback Vito Popelka.

Syracuse journeyed to State College, Pa., for their second encounter and their second loss. Penn State, rated the top yearling eleven in the East, was fortunate to emerge from the battle on the long end of a 20-12 score. Little "Slivers" Slovenski, shifty Hill wingback, tallied both Orange scores.

The steadily improving Hillmen came into their own with a vengeance in the next clash, the all-important Colgate game which took place at Hamilton. The final tally was 25-13. Slovenski was again outstanding, scoring twice and reeling off several long runs. End Paul McKee went over on a pass from Ellis and tailback Don Vesper crashed into the end zone on a plunge from the 1-yard stripe.

The yearlings climaxed their season by crushing Wyoming seminary, 32-7. "Slivers" again scored twice, once on a scintillating 50-yard dash.

WOMEN'S

Crisp fall days brought forth the coeds to participate in the many sports activities on the campus. Under the direction of the Women's Athletic Association (hereinafter the WAA), these would-be female athletes carried out a full program.

Organized under the supervision of Kathryn Stauffer, faculty adviser, WAA sports a governing board headed by Betty Rood, president, Marian Smith, vice-president, Isabel Basye, secretary, Sue Gloger, general sports manager, Bernice Carroll, chairman of lower house, Constance Green, publicity manager, and the managers of the various sports.

Prospective Robin Hoods, forty strong, invaded the archery range under the watchful eye of Manager Suzanne Thevenet. They held an elimination tournament, planned a telegraphic meet, and practised constantly until cold weather forced them indoors.

A whirl of blue and yellow shorts could be seen on the tennis courts as coeds vied for honors in tournaments for individual competition. Margaret Thomas was their manager.

Twice a week fifty girls met on the hockey field to engage in wild chases for an elusive wooden ball. Competitive groups divided into upper and lower class women were managed by Virginia Robertson.

Casually drifting snowflakes sent the 300 sports fiends scurrying to the gym where they enjoyed the WAA Fall Sports Supper, and discussed plans for winter activities.

WHAT a year! And we hope you're saying "What a yearbook!"

Between these two covers we have tried to condense the whole of it. In the class sections we have your pictures; in the sports section, your athletes; in the candid section, your life. We trotted to the lectures at Town Hall; saddle-shoe dances at Slocum, and no-shoe dance at Winter Carnival; football games, basketball games, and just games.

We formed a Fifth Column and spied upon your activities in groups, both honorary and social. We hope you now know what all those Greek letters mean that you see so often in the Daily Orange.

Because they really do play such a vital part in our respective lives, we have a faculty section devoted to deans, heads of departments, and views of buildings. Better look twice at those views, just to be sure you recognize them.

We made ourselves so unpopular around sorority and fraternity houses trying to get the best possible stories for their pages, that they just had to give us what you see there.

Most of all we want to tell you what a wonderful staff we've had this year. Everyone worked like fury and even had brainstorm every time we were stuck for an idea, or else there appeared one of those millions of students who contributed their ideas and suggestions to this book. Special recognition for the drawings on the division pages goes to George Haley; on the senior pages, to Marian Hurd. Candid photographs were taken by T. Parker Hall and Frank DiGiacomo.

HARRY GUSTAVSON, BUSINESS MANAGER

THERE'S one nice thing about being an editor — people always speak to you. They say: "Where did you get that horrible cartoon you put on page 3 of the last issue?", or "Why didn't I get my Syracusan five days ahead of anyone else?", or body else at the Senior Ball got photographed."

And so it goes. It seems there is a rumor afloat that the Syracusan is edited by magic. On the night of the 24th of almost any month, the editor and one or two staff members, wave a wand, sing a song, and by the morning of the 25th lots and lots of Syracusans are waiting at the doors of all the eager subscribers.

Actually, the Syracusan staff has only about three days out of every month in which they are not all tied up with the deadline. "Some day," moaned one of said staff members, "we're going to hang ourselves on a deadline."

Far from being magic, putting out the campus monthly is a very complicated process. Un-technically speaking, it involves "pasting up" each page of the magazine exactly as it will look when printed. This means scurrying around for art work, pictures, type, and everything else in order to get it all in at once. The magazine is printed in Rochester which accounts for the fact that ten days must be allowed for printing (and "circumstances beyond our control").

So much for the process. People who come wandering into the office for various reasons rarely go away impressed with the technical details of putting out the magazine. But invariably they shake their heads in wonder over the staff meetings. These meetings find everyone on the staff (and a few stray onlookers) jammed into the little glass birdcage they call the office, and trying to get their best ideas written down on a little scrap of paper, the editor charitably calls her "notebook".

Managing editor, Larry Waddell is rarely without his pipe, his plaid shirt, and a sheaf of papers on which he has scores of ideas for layouts. He can do everything from pasting up a page to setting up type — and he does.

Art editor, Betty Jane Jackson, shows very few signs of temperament and will work diligently far into the night fixing up other people's mistakes or getting the pages straight. Feature editor, Erv Rosen, is a very busy man. He leaves notes around the office saying "I'll be back" . . . and he usually gets there. Title of "he-ymm-ah" editor goes to Patty Evans, who usually breezes in for a few minutes, leaves everyone in hysterics and then goes home to write one of those irrepressible articles. Newest staff member is Ed Rechberger who so loves a party that "The Syracusean Goes To . . ." features were started just so he could go places and photograph things.

As for "ye ed" . . . the staff always knows when things are getting crucial when Martha says: "Anybody got a match" and then proceeds to forget she asked for it. Her greatest amusement (aside from the remarks of the humor staff) is watching people come into the office, stand in front of her desk and say: "I'd like to see the editor, please."

THE booming headlines of wartime newspapers found their counterpart in collegiate journalism in 1941-1942 as The Daily Orange strove to cover every phase of University war activity. Week after week passed — after the Pearl Harbor attack — in which Orange reporters and editors wrote more “banner” headlines than any staff in the last 25 years, informing students and faculty members of the ways they could best serve their country’s interests.

Fortunately, the editors of The Orange during the past few years did not pursue a policy of isolationism from world affairs. At times editorials verged on a forthright policy of intervention. As part of this program, The Daily Orange initiated a campaign seeking constructive peace ideas from individuals associated with the University. This drive was based on the assumption that the United States would soon enter the war, and it was therefore wise to discuss post-war plans before the heat of battle subordinated the real causes for war. The results of the solicitation were most heartening and reached a climax the day Uncle Sam marshalled his forces for a blow at Japanese perfidy. On that day The Orange devoted half its front page and more than half of its editorial page to peace suggestions.

Years of careful organization by Orange editors also brought fruit on the campus front. This year the largest staff in the history of the paper cracked down on the heads of cliques within the student groups which sought to achieve ends not in the best interests of the student body.

In alarming order various campus groups suddenly found themselves the object of searching probes. The senior class executives, the Interfraternity council, the Men's Student government, the Independent Women's council, and even the hallowed Women's Student government were editorially investigated for various and sundry reasons — not on the order of muckraking. Columnists on The Orange attempted to stand independently by principles instead of prejudices and favorites. The first test of this policy came when the Interfraternity council tried to block news channels. After two months — in which The Orange refused to report Interfraternity council news unless The Orange could gather the news the way it wished — reporters again covered the council as they did before the censorship was attempted.

Heavy advertising sales by The Daily Orange business staff permitted the second largest Orange ever published — a 20-page Colgate issue. Despite war curtailments advertising lineage was extremely high and layouts improved accordingly.

Sponsored by The Orange were the annual bowling tournament, the Esquire contest for the best-dressed man, the football fan's forum, a coed fashion show, several scientific opinion polls, and a Bill of Rights issue.

EMPIRE FORESTER AND CAMP LOG

THE 1942 Empire Forester, yearbook of the College of Forestry, emphasized student activities in classes and sports and also a history of the departments of the college. The book portrays all activities of a forester's life—barbecues, banquets, dances, and camping trips. The latter is covered in a special section called the Camp Log. Here the experiences of prospective juniors at summer camp for six weeks in the Adirondacks are recorded.

In February, the staff sponsored the annual Sweethearts Ball, social highlight of the college. The Woodchopper's brawl, put on by the Camp Log boys, featured nail-driving and wood-chopping contests.

Music and Drama

TAMBOURINE AND BONES

FOR the second consecutive year Tambourine and Bones departed from its original schedule of one big musical a year and produced two. Students and city people alike reveled in the hilarity of "Piety Hill Billy", written and directed by T and B's own president and star, Joyce Crabtree. The show, presented on Interfraternity week-end by a cast of sixty, was acclaimed by many as the organization's best production. The brilliant costumes, southern drawls, and clever script were the talk of the campus for days.

The versatile members and aspirants to Tambourine and Bones next staged an ice revue for the Winter Carnival. This was the second all-student show on skates with dancing, singing, and comedy acts.

As material evidence of the popularity of the society's musical-comedy shows, many campus and civic organizations have requested performers to entertain at their club programs. During the year Tambourine and Bones talent was enjoyed at student convocations, WSS-MSG dances, and various banquets. Several of the students participated in a Red Cross show for national defense.

The twenty-eight members of the society have bi-monthly meetings in which they discuss shows for the year and plans for pledging. This year they experimented with musicals on the balcony stage, newly constructed this past summer. Together with Boar's Head, T. and B. gave a testimonial banquet in honor of Proefssor Sawyer Falk, which was followed by a formal pledge dance. Nearly 400 musically talented students gain experience under the supervision of John Moe, technical director, in the many phases of the theater by constructing scenery, making costumes, working out dance routines and finally putting on the finished production.

SYRACUSE students with an interest in any of the phases of dramatics find the answer to their prayers in their own civic university theater.

As their opening play of the season Boar's Head produced John Barrymore's star vehicle play, "My Dear Children." A credit to the Civic was the production of William Saroyan's "Jim Dandy." The theater was one of forty civic community theaters which presented the play as a project of the National Theater conference.

A testimonial banquet was given by Boar's Head and Tambourine and Bones in honor of Professor Sawyer Falk for his fifteen years of service to the University and Civic. The students presented him with a watch as a token of their esteem and appreciation for all he has done in helping to make their theater a success. Professor Falk chooses the plays with an eye to the future, and his aim to keep abreast of plays right off Broadway is realized not only in title, but in all phases of production.

The thirty member of Boar's Head, chosen by merit in acting, production and business, gave special attention this year to a series of one-act plays on the new balcony stage. Planned as a social evening, members were invited to attend two one-act plays inbetween which refreshments were served. The campus thespians are headed by Sally Rowe.

Although it is primarily interested in stage productions, Boar's Head also brings to its theater experimental motion pictures. An interesting movie and play combination was worked out in the showing of "Time in the Sun" and the presentation of "Soldadera." Busy people these dramatists, but they love it!

Among the regularly featured programs broadcast over the local stations WFBF and WSYR were "Youth Faces War," "Syracuse Front," "Ask the Scientist," "Perspective for War," and the University Singers. SYRACUSE UNIVERSITY CHORUS

THE University Chorus, under the leadership of Dr. Howard Lyman, professor of voice and choral music in the College of Fine Arts, is composed of 250 students, faculty members and city singers. Highlights of this, their thirtieth season, included the "Messiah" performances on December 11 which featured four young soloists: Harriet Henders, soprano; Jean Watson, contralto; Harold Haugh, tenor; and Gean Greewell, bass-baritone.

On April 30, the Spring Festival concert brought John Brownlee, Metropolitan Opera baritone. He was heard in the noted "Toreador's Song" (from Carmen) with the Male voices, and the Stanford "Songs of the Fleet" with the full Chorus and orchestra.

The Chorus presented a variety of works (both unaccompanied and with piano, organ and orchestra) by Bach, Mozart, Morley, Elgar, Gounod, and a new mixed chorus "Green Rafters" (Edwin Markham) by Jack Duro of the Theory and Piano faculty of the College of Fine Arts.

The University Chorus is open to all singers (college and city) up to stage capacity. The work is required in Fine Arts music courses, and elective credit is granted in other colleges as well.

Military

RESERVE OFFICERS' TRAINING CORPS

THE words of Colonel A. B. Kaempfer, commanding officer of Syracuse University ROTC, "I cannot emphasize too strongly the importance of university training in our defense program," expresses the whole administration's attitude in this national crisis. University men today are being trained along two lines — specialized civilian service and military service. In addition to offering students the advantages of an excellent academic curriculum in many fields, Syracuse University provides its men students the opportunity to train for military service in the Reserve Officers Training Corps.

By successfully completing the two year basic course given in the freshman and sophomore years, men students may qualify as non-commissioned officers in the Army Reserve or such other military forces as may be organized for service during the emergency. If, in addition, they are selected for and successfully complete the advanced course, they are eligible for a Reserve Officer's commission as Second Lieutenant.

Over a thousand men are voluntarily enrolled in ROTC of whom 550 are freshmen. This group of would-be officers drill on the old Oval four hours a week and study military strategy of the campaigns and battles throughout the history of the United States. The methods of making maps, reading them and handling all weapons from army rifles to machine guns are correlated with scouting and patrolling.

At the end of this two-year period, 70 sophomores are selected on a scholastic and physical fitness basis to take the advance junior and senior courses. They learn combat principles, read aerial photos, handle machine guns and other weapons, learn newest anti-aircraft and tank defense, the administration of supplies, military law, and signal communications.

Cadet-Colonel Bob Chesbro commands the regiment of three battalions. Each battalion, headed by a Lt. Colonel or Major, is composed of four companies with their individual Cadet Captains. The companies are divided into platoons which are in charge of a First Lieutenant. Administration, training and instruction are under the direction and close supervision of officers and non-commissioned officers of the U. S. Army, who are assigned to the University by the War Department for that purpose.

Those men enlisted for ROTC who show outstanding military ability and interest may be pledged to Scabbard and Blade, national military honorary who's purpose is to train men to become better officers, stressing appearance and becoming conduct. The organization cooperated with Pershing Rifles in presenting the Military Ball at the Hotel Syracuse in November. Amid the pomp and pageantry afforded

At their formal initiation banquet Professor Finla Crawford and Coach Lew Andres were initiated as honorary members. Brigadier General Asa Singleton, headmaster at Manlius, ret., and the Chancellor were the speakers.

Cadet Captain Bill Schutt heads the organization of 55 members which is advised by Lt. Edward McEvoy.

Pershing Rifles is a national military society designed to promote better military understanding among the cadets. Recognized as the best drilled men on the campus, the organization holds exhibition drills for various campus and outside organizations. One of the high lights of the Military Ball was the sharp clicking of guns and heels as Pershing Rifles men went through a full-dress drill.

Candidates for membership must be regularly enrolled members of the basic course of a senior ROTC unit and must show outstanding ability and interest in military work. Cadet Captain Thomas Anastassiau heads the organization which is sponsored by Eleanor Jane Collette and advised by Captain John Walker.

PERSHING RIFLES

Organizations

ALPHA PHI OMEGA

To Alpha Phi Omega fell the tasks of finger-printing students at registration last fall, and of cleaning the campus before Sunday chapel after Colgate weekend. Along more enjoyable lines of activities — it was this organization in conjunction with the Outing club, which shared the responsibility for the Snow Ball, a vital part of Winter Carnival Weekend. The members also sponsor the Senior Scout conference held every year in the city. Alpha Phi Omega is national scouting fraternity. Any student who is a Boy Scout is eligible for membership.

First Row: R. Treubig; P. Britton; R. Tanner; D. Borchers, treas.; L. Leney, pres.; W. Anderson, vice-pres.; D. Kaiser, sec.; R. Booth; C. Gardner; L. Howe. Second Row: F. Vescera; H. Williams; W. Foster; A. Heidgerd; H. Warren; R. Black; D. Marchant; R. Williams; P. Campbell; R. Paris; R. Macgregor; W. Baird.

This organization, whose president is Steve Fitchijian, strives to better understand the problems of teaching and to develop contacts with business people alternating between social and business meeting. The club meets once a month. A professional speaker usually presides at these business meetings. The purpose of this club is the general development of the student in the field of business and is primarily an organization for students planning to teach business subjects. Juniors, seniors and graduate students are eligible.

First Row: B. Jayne; B. Mackin; G. Alper. Second Row: R. Wilcox; W. Duggan; T. Riggs; C. Lizdas, sec.-treas.; S. Fitchijian, pres.; B. Kliman; H. White; M. Rosenthal. Third Row: D. BUSINESS EDUCATION CLUB

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE ORGANIZATION

Two vesper service programs comprised the year's activities of the Christian Science organization, authorized Chapel group for students interested in Christian Science. The regular schedule of the organization includes testimonial meetings at least twice a month and a business meeting once every two months. To assist Christian Science students Mr. Chauncey Whitney Sampsell, C.S.B., a practitioner, was selected as advisor to the organization three years ago. Mr. Sampsell is also a member of the Hendricks Chapel board. Other activities of the group include a reception for freshmen and transfer students in the fall.

First Row: H. Dean; M. Buckenheu, sec.; C. Sampsell, sponsor; K. Hopper, pres.; E. Beckwith, reader; R. Booth, treas.; F. Buckenheu. Second Row: B. Waring; E. Swanson; J. Munro; C. Klock; W. Dizer; G. Willey; D. Major; R. Swansfeger; B. Cheney.

The City Women's Club is a social organization which tries to help city coeds become better acquainted with each other and more familiar with the campus. The club holds monthly meetings when the girls attempt to solve problems common to women students who live off campus. Annual activities of the club are a banquet and a picnic. In the fall the girls collected newspapers to raise money. As a project this year the club chose to aid national defense.

First Row: V. Allen; K. Moyer; D. Briggs, pres.; A. Calder, faculty advisor; M. Jores, vice-pres.; J. Wood, treas. Second Row: I. Besdin; E. Jenney; M. Knappenberger; S. Frank; M. Holstein; B. CITY WOMEN'S CLUB

ENGINEER'S CLUB

Composed of engineering students, the Engineer's club maintains its own living center on College Place. Thus the group has its own social calendar and each year schedules a formal and vic dance, together with informal outings. Achievements this year included the intramural football championship for living centers. The engineers lost the all-University championship in football by a slight margin. Many of the essentials of living center life are obtained on a cooperative basis and the yearly renewal of the club's program indicates that students find that type of living highly satisfactory.

First Row: J. Schantz; J. Roland; W. Terry; R. Roy; R. Shumway; R. Sweeney; A. Pebrinkis.

The Flint and Feather club is composed of campus women living in or around Buffalo and it is there that most of their activities are held. New members were initiated into the club in Buffalo during Christmas vacation. A tea was given for prospective freshmen and alumnae at Easter time. Joint meetings are held with Scalp and Blade, a similar organization for Buffalo men. In conjunction with Scalp and Blade and the Genesee Valley club, the organization held a successful dance on campus February 21. Teas, dances, and dinners in Buffalo supplement the social meetings on the campus.

FLINT AND FEATHER

HOME ECONOMICS CLUB

All girls enrolled in Home Economics are eligible to join this club. The club sponsors such activities as knitting for the Red Cross, an annual gang date with Robin Hood and an annual dance.

First Row: B. Cuffney; D. Driscoll; L. Holmes; P. Crockett; V. Cowles. Second Row: V. Terry; N. Gwynn; M. Palmer; M. Goodjon; M. Early; M. Bean; A. Block; E. Crowe. Third Row: M. Smith; J. Starting the year with a hike to Green Lake, the Outing club followed up with a student-faculty steak roast, at which students chatted informally with their professors. A moonlight hayride, a Halloween party, a skating party, and a Sadie Hawkins celebration and a carol sing at the Chancellor's home are only a few of their activities. They sponsored a Snow Ball at Drumlins in conjunction with the Winter Carnival. In the spring they held a skating and theatre party, and finished off the year with a bike hike.

OUTING CLUB

SCALP AND BLADE

One of the several University regional organizations, Scalp and Blade, national society of men from Buffalo and vicinity, added its bit to the University social calendar by sponsoring a dance in cooperation with the Genesee Valley club and Flint and Feather in the winter. Building on the success of that affair, the club worked overtime to insure the best of entertainment for the Navy Ball. On the sports agenda for the club was a bowling tournament with Colgate and Cornell teams. Scalp and Blade was founded in 1893 at Cornell University. Monthly meetings are held to foster fellowship among Buffalo residents.

First Row: F. Kenline, vice-pres.; A. Wooler, pres.; R. Wolcott, sec. Second Row: G. McKee; D. Dabrowski; R. Franger; C. Helbert; D. Damon.

The seventy-eight members of this club meet once a month speaking Spanish and studying Spanish life. They held a colorful Fiesta in Marshall auditorium in December. Members of the faculty, Professor Stanislawski of the Geography department and Dr. Foster of the Sociology department, gave talks on Mexico. These students wrote and sponsored two plays this spring.

First Row: V. Patterson; A. Yeoman; S. Place. Second Row: C. Bronkhorst; M. Livingston; C. Giardina; E. Gage; F. Warren; R. Pascall; D. Comfort. Third Row: J. Sarvay; M. Roy; J. Smith; H. SPANISH CLUB

STUDENT UNION

Someone threw a monkey wrench in the machinery of the Student Union organization in 1941-42. It wasn't intentional, but the University administration discovered at a late date that the Student Union could not hold its bridge tournament because of certain inviolable University rules about the use of buildings. So, with no bridge tournament, the heart of the Student Union program, the Unionists" didn't hold many meetings. Grace Port performed presidential duties capably and Mary Martina assisted as secretary. To be a member, the Student Union requires a set number of hours devoted to Student Union work.

First Row: M. Knaack; P. Moon; G. Port; B. Beardsley; M. Martina. Second Row: J. Wildnauer; S. Doell; D. Shaw; M. Towne; H. Dean; M. Samman; R. McLellan.

Organized in 1939-40, the Syracuse Rowing club fostered a program intended to increase interest in crew races during the past year. An important part of this undertaking was an informal meeting at which freshmen were indoctrinated in crew lore. Still another feature of this project was the magazine sent to alumni, informing them about the present status of crew at Syracuse. Now members of the organization are 100 alumni and 25 undergraduates. One year at Poughkeepsie and one year on the crew are needed for membership. One other means by which the organization fulfills its stated purpose is the collecting of pictures of the crew.

SYRACUSE ROWING CLUB

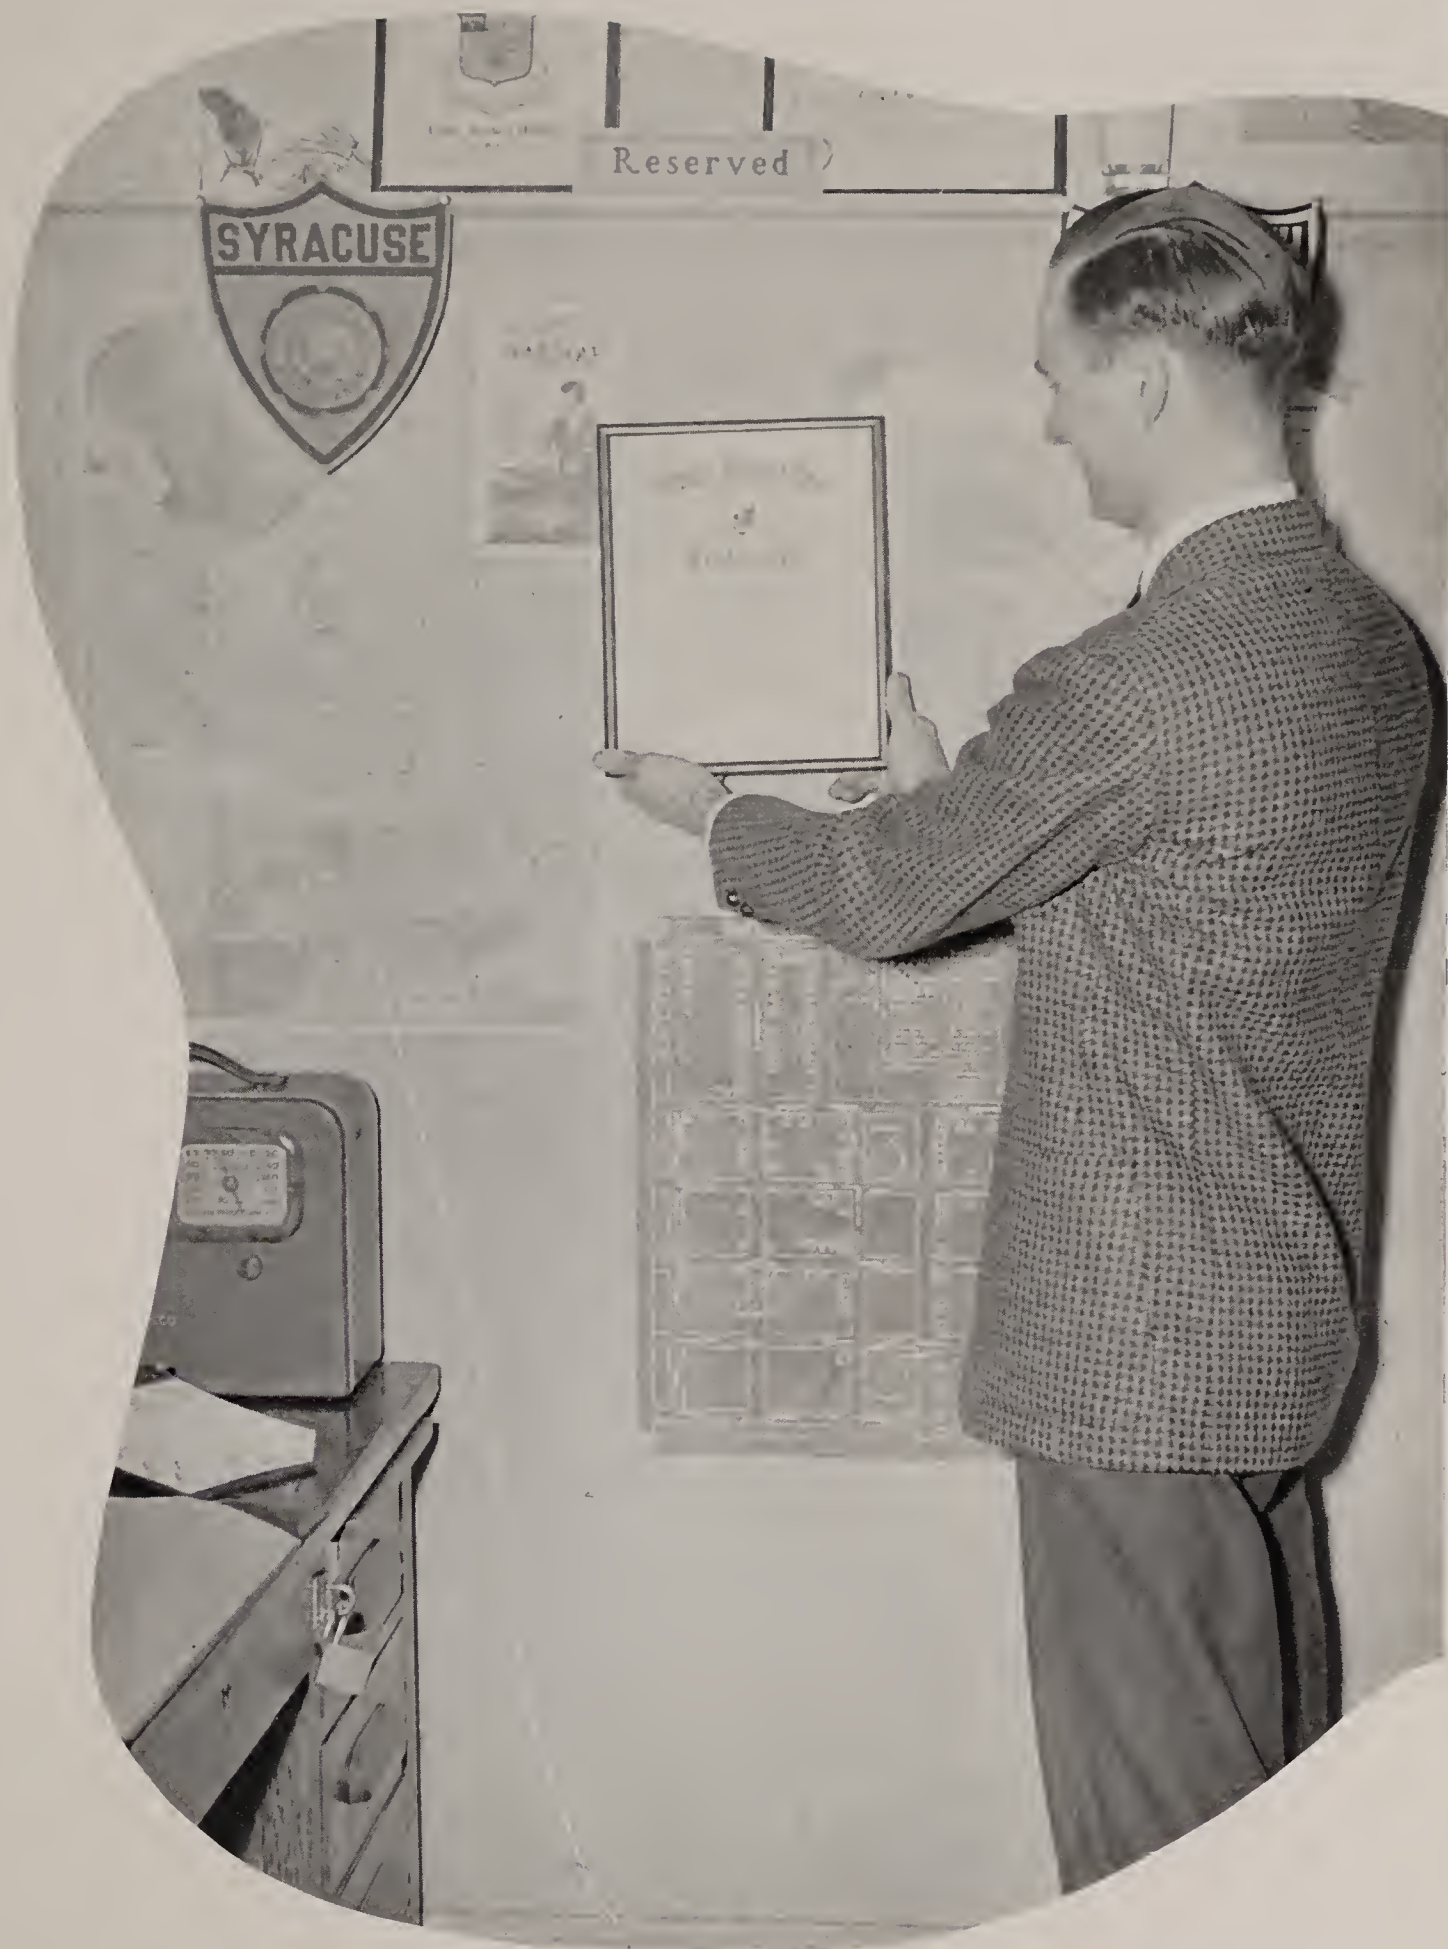

CANDIDATES FOR WINTER CARNIVAL QUEEN Margaret Rogers, Mary Jo Hewitt, Nancy Aubel, Nancy Tyler, Dorothy Scott, Jean Taylor

Two deviations from the norm made this year's Winter Carnival outstanding in the annals of the winter fun feats. First, the carnival was held on the weekend it was scheduled. Secondly, Margaret Rogers, an Independent, copped the Carnival queenship. The Snow Ball attracted a record throng of dancers equalling the attendance record set the night before at the Stocking-foot dance, when the dancers relaxed their dignity to slide on the Drumlins floor boards. First women's intercollegiate ski meet at Syracuse and a jumping meet with Cornell, Colgate and Syracuse competing, plus a Tambourine and Bones torch-light parade on the ice were held.

WINTER CARNIVAL

ALPHA CHI SIGMA

This year's activities of Alpha Chi Sigma, national professional chemistry fraternity, included two smokers and two banquets in the way of social events. At an open house held for the Chemistry department last fall, Dr. A. J. King gave a demonstration of glass blowing. In November, Dr. John N. Street, noted rubber chemist, was the first speaker of the newly established annual Alpha Chi Sigma Lectureship. In December, Raymond Bashford, '43, William White, '43, and Richard Leary, '42, were initiated by the fraternity. This Spring a convocation on laboratory accidents and their prevention was held.

First Row: T. Carpenter; L. Percy, sec.; R. Holly, treas.; C. Bishop, pres.; C. Cole, vice-pres.; A. Ferris. Second Row: C. Fullerton; R. Leary; R. Bashford; V. Fusco; W. Ulrich; J. Parsell.

A new idea for meetings was instituted this year. The club had several Sunday night supper sessions during which the members had a wonderful opportunity to get chummy with some of the professional advertising men from downtown Syracuse. Each year more and more graduates are finding positions in advertising agencies and advertising departments of stores, largely through their associations in this honorary. This is a national professional advertising fraternity. Membership is open to advertising majors and to members of the business staffs of student publications. This national organization was founded in 1913.

ALPHA DELTA SIGMA

ALPHA KAPPA PSI

Even Alpha Kappa Psi, national professional fraternity of business students, felt the brunt of stepped-up production for Uncle Sam's forces. For the first time since the organization was formed trips to factories — now engaged in war production — had to be cancelled. The business students, however, worked overtime on a placement sheet listing every field of business and the qualifications of individual seniors. The fraternity hopes that a successful placement sheet will eventually lead to a permanent placement bureau.

First Row: C. Miller; C. Navarra; W. Dizer; R. Kahn; R. Van Alstine. Second Row: G. Bluhm; R. Bailey; P. DePumpo, sec.; J. Hansen, faculty advisor; W. Aiken, pres.; C. DeCecca, vice-pres.; H. Alpha Xi Alpha, fine arts honorary for design students, completed a year replete with practical field trips and social functions for relaxation under the direction of President Jean Eaton and Professor Montague Charman. During the Fall the group made an excursion to the wall paper factory at Cortland. This was supplemented with a Christmas party at which sophomores provided the entertainment. At the beginning of the spring social season, the honorary sponsored a Fine Arts dance, together with other artists' honoraries. In March, the design students climaxed their activities with an initiation banquet.

First Row: M. Hiester; N. Rapell, vice-pres.; J. Eaton, pres.; E. Champlin, treas.; J. Best, sec.; R. Marcus. Second Row: J. Tasman; V. Beach; L. Cahen; H. Nielsen; W. Boin; M. Rugg; S. Gates; H. Moore.

ALPHA XI SIGMA

Now, revivals usually infer the saving of souls, but this is not the case with our Phi Betes of Forestry! Yes, they had a revival but it constituted the rebirth of the once traditional "Eight ball" dance, aimed to defy all superstitions. Held in the rotunda of Bray hall on March 13, all were readily convinced. These diverse gentlemen also keep their fellow foresters well informed with a weekly news sheet known as the "Knot-Hole". This year they have featured an orientation program for forestry freshmen and discussion groups patterned after Town Hall.

Tops of the social activities of the members of the American Institute of Chemical Engineers was the Halloween dance last fall. Other important items on the agenda of the engineers were monthly meetings at which problems which frequently crop up in the engineering field were discussed and reported on. A professional society, the local chapter was organized to acquaint and interest undergraduates in the study of subjects pertaining to their profession. At the meetings industrial leaders and teachers lead open forums.

AMERICAN INSTITUTE OF CHEMICAL ENGINEERS

AMERICAN SOCIETY OF CIVIL ENGINEERS

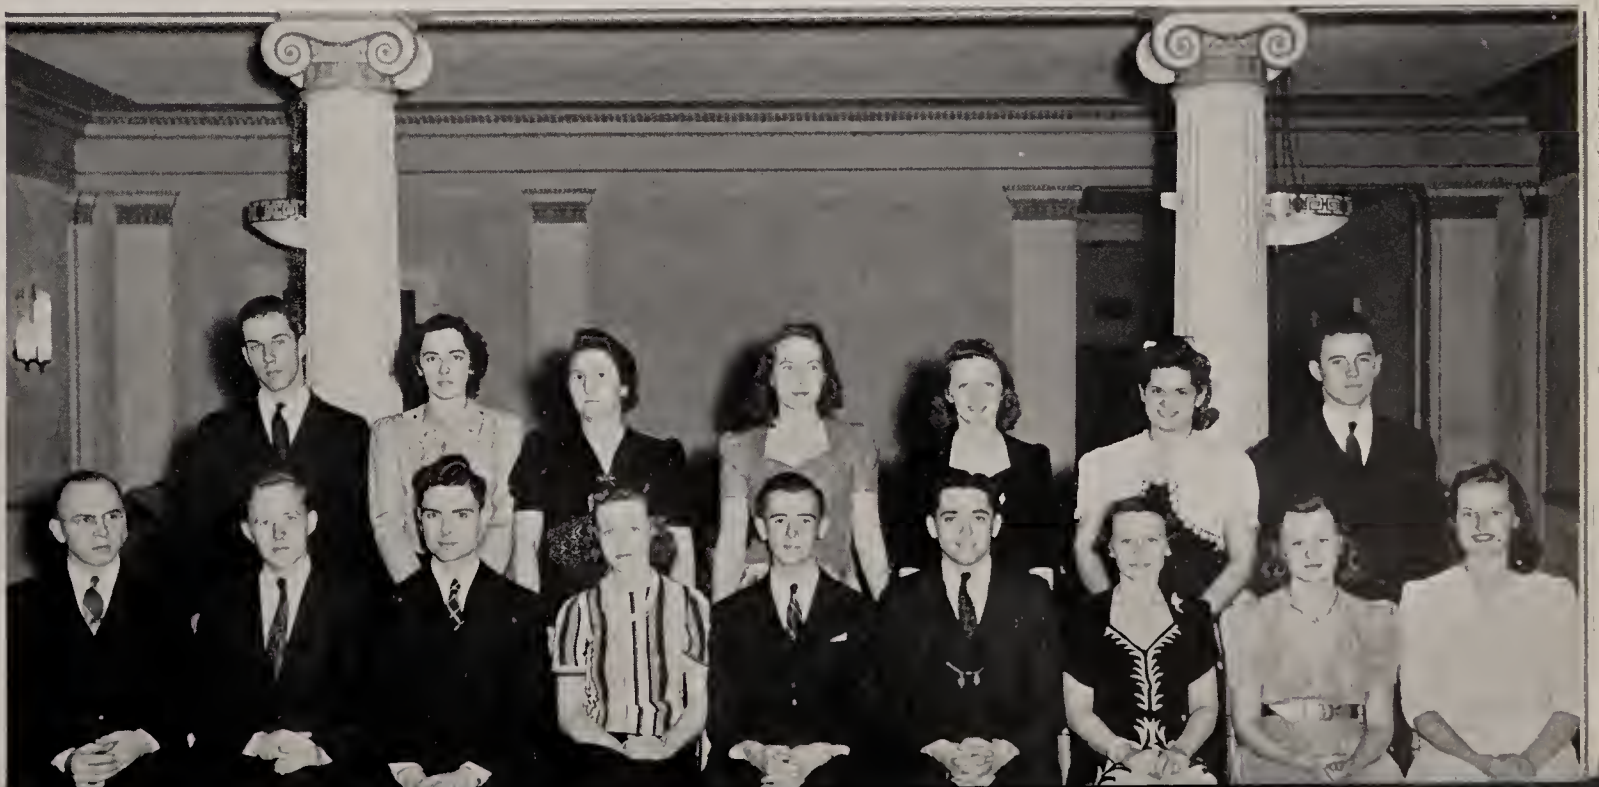

Membership in the student chapter is open to all sophomores, juniors and seniors in the Civil Engineering department of the College of Applied Science. This chapter acquaints students with the field of civil engineering by means of field trips and monthly meetings. Speakers from the engineering field or slides or moving pictures are provided through the courtesy of the National chapter. Every spring the following engineering schools, Cornell, Syracuse, R.P.I. and Union, participate in an annual conference.

Beta Gamma Sigma, national scholastic honorary for scholars in business administration, is one of the few campus organizations composed of both students and faculty members. Student members are taken from the upper ten per cent of the senior class and the upper two per cent of the junior class. One of the regular functions of the organization is the inscribing of the name of the freshman student with the highest average on a plaque in Slocum hall. Beta Gamma Sigma attempts to encourage and reward scholarship and accomplishment in business activities and to promote honesty and integrity in business practice.

BETA GAMMA SIGMA

DELTA PHI SIGMA

Following the program of former years, Delta Phi Sigma has contributed substantially, both in effort and in money to a library fund for the purpose of building and maintaining a finance library. This fund is administered by the University library and the trustees of Delta Phi Sigma. At present the organization has contributed more than five hundred dollars to the fund. The books purchased are current books on finance and related subjects by recognized authors. Financial periodicals are purchased and left in the magazine rooms of the main library.

First Row: C. Salese; W. Aiken; H. Harvey, pres.; C. Miller, sec.-treas.; J. Dishaw. Second Row: C. Prather; F. Hoefler; T. Thompson; W. Schutt; O. Prarie.

Eta Pi Upsilon, senior women's honorary, struck out in a new direction this year, cancelling the usual job clinic and co-sponsoring in its place the discussion of a major program for sophomores. This drastic action necessitated an intricate program of discussion sessions and individual conferences and Eta Pi Upsilon succeeded nobly, attracting record crowds to all conferences. Eta Pi also has a gold star coming for the generalship of the Spring weesend activities and a newer project, the sending of copies of the Readers' Digest to South American countries.

ETA PI UPSILON

JUNIOR EASTERN ARTS ASSOC.

Gamma Rho Tau, national men's business administration honorary, has been operating under a handicap this year as several of their members have been drafted. For this reason, there have been no meetings since Christmas but previous to that the fraternity had three meetings. At their meetings experts in the field of business discussed education problems concerning commercial subjects. In October, Clinton A. Reed was their speaker. Old and new members held an initiation banquet just before Christmas. Dr. Jones from the Syracuse Administration building spoke at this banquet.

The social program of the Junior Eastern Arts association started with a bang this fall as all members joined in a "Dutch Treat" party, dinner at Little China followed by roller skating. Taking advantage of the weather before the onslaught of winter, they hiked and picniced to Green Lake. But the high point of the year ends with the annual convention in New York. Each year at the convention Syracuse student art is exhibited in competition with other universities.

KAPPA PHI KAPPA

Promoting the best interests of public school education was the primary aim of Kappa Phi Kappa, men's national professional education fraternity, during the past year. Meeting once each month, the fraternity members debate problems confronting today's educators and propose solutions to these problems. A joint banquet is held every year with Pi Lambda Theta. This dinner is regarded as the peak of the fraternity's activity and is attended by many Kappa Phi Kappa alumni.

Omicron Nu's twenty-five Home Economics coeds were pioneers this year in the Syracuse chapter of the national honorary. One of the thirty-five chapters in the country, the organization's purpose is to foster greater interest in Home Economics. Their meetings are held every other Thursday at five o'clock. This year they have had a faculty tea and as a special treat the chairman of the State Home Economics Board came and spoke to them. As a special project they presented an award to this year's outstanding student in Home Economics.

ORANGE KEY

The capstone of activities and scholastic success for junior men, Orange Key, held its banner high during the scholastic year of 1941-42. Confining itself for the major part of the year to performing service functions for the University, the newly formed honorary — now three years old — aided the chaperoning of high school students at the Empire State Press association conference last fall. The climax of the season was the second annual Orange Key dance — this time the Hex Hop in the trophy room of the gym.

Phi Beta Kappa, national scholastic honorary in the College of Liberal Arts, holds a formal initiation twice a year. The spring initiation took place at the May banquet when, as is customary, an award of fifty dollars was presented to the girl and boy meeting the scholastic, activity, and moral qualifications set up by the organization. The awards were presented to Audrey Hanse and Fred Harvey this year. Not more than one fourth of any class may be taken at any one time. At present there are over one hundred and ten thousand members of the organization and one hundred and forty chapters.

PHI KAPPA ALPHA

Since its founding Phi Kappa Alpha, senior men's honorary, has helped to create and foster Syracuse spirit and traditions. As a step along these lines, this year the organization presented to Chancellor Graham and the University Syracuse's own beloved flag. The membership of Phi Kappa Alpha is limited to eight undergraduate students, who are chosen in their junior year for their participation in extra-curricular activities in the fields of athletics, religion or government, and for maintaining a high scholastic average for a period of three years.

Second Row: F. Harvey; J. Luchsinger; L. Gettman.

The primary objective of the national honorary of Phi Kappa Phi is to recognize and encourage superior scholarship. The society annually awards fellowships for graduate study. Membership is limited to seniors outstanding in activities and personality as well as in scholastic achievement.

PHI MU ALPHA

To vary their meetings this year the members of Phi Mu Alpha held a joint recital with Sigma Alpha Iota, women's music honorary, in Crouse auditorium. The program contained vocal and instrumental numbers in which members of both honoraries participated. The regular meetings are held every week and the organization is fortunate in having its own fraternity house for both meeting and social purposes. This national musical fraternity for men began upon the Syracuse campus as early as 1904 and although it was discontinued for a few years after that, it again resumed activity in 1921.

PI DELTA NU

Those eligible for membership in Pi Delta Nu, women's national science honorary, are women majoring in chemistry, zoology, nutrition, and other sciences who have a "B" average in their major. This organization holds a business or social meeting twice a month. The business meetings usually feature a talk by a faculty member, which serves to give the members a broader view of the several branches of science. Pi Delta Nu's social program was "rounded out" by roller skating parties, dances, and other social events this year. Last fall the Pi Delta Nu women held a joint party with the Alpha Xi Sigmas.

PI LAMBDA SIGMA

Pi Lambda Sigma, honorary library fraternity, entertained the entire student body of the School of Library Science this fall in addition to planning and carrying out a social dinner meeting and the annual initiation banquet in the spring. This fraternity was founded in the Library School of Syracuse University in 1903. It was probably the earliest Greek letter fraternity to be founded in a library school. For 23 years it existed as a social fraternity, but in 1927 was reorganized as an honorary fraternity. The purpose of this honorary is to foster and reward scholarship in the special field of Library Science.

What women can do to help speed a victory over the Axis was the chief problem considered during the year by Pi Lambda Theta, honorary and professional women's teachers' fraternity. Work on this project was stimulated by study groups. For social activity, the organization held a picnic in the fall. Juniors, seniors, and graduate students entering the field of education with a "B" average are eligible for membership. To carry out their heavy schedule of activities, the group holds meeting at least once each month.

Like many other campus organizations Psi Chi, national honorary society in psychology, wove its program around the theme of civilian morale and national defense. To forward this program Psi Chi utilized a membership of 33 students. The organization also has 31 associate members. Cooperation with Professor Floyd H. Allport's graduate seminar in national morale constituted the major portion of the year's program. Meetings are held at least once each month, and usually feature discussions of pertinent psychological problems. Psi Chi was founded in 1929.

ROBIN HOOD

Number one on the accomplishment list of Robin Hood, junior honorary for forestry students, was the placing of a plaque on the English oak which was brought from Sherwood forest. Number two was the presentation of a cup to the outstanding senior in forestry. To these tasks the foresters added the browsing library project and contributed books of a non-technical nature to the Forestry library. Juniors who have a scholastic average of 1.5, have shown proficiency in some major activity, and who show desirable traits of character are eligible for membership. The organization is formed to serve the College of Forestry.

SIGMA ALPHA IOTA

SIGMA CHI ALPHA

Sigma Chi Alpha, professional honorary fraternity for sophomores and upper-class students in public school art, directed its efforts this year toward promoting cooperation between the department of architecture and the College of Fine Arts. Toward this end, the organization pooled its talent with other fine arts honoraries to sponsor a dance at the end of the winter social season. Another underlying motivation of the fraternity, educating the general public so that they will appreciate art, was emphasized by Dr. Ross Hoople at one of the organization's meetings. Other meetings stressed the importance of cooperation and scholarship.

SIGMA IOTA EPSILON

Sigma Iota Epsilon, national business management honorary, caught the war bug in the same manner as most other campus organizations. But these future businessmen sounded another note, that of problems of production arising out of the war economy. Added attractions on the year's program for the business students included a smoker during rushing in the fall and an initiation banquet at which Arthur Lewis of the Mutual Insurance Company spoke. This organization was founded in 1927 at the University of Illinois.

The departmental organization for architecture students, Sigma Upsilon Alpha, holds three meetings each month in an effort to improve the facilities offered architects at the University. Under Murray Hueber, president, the society requires a "C" average, plus approval of members of the organization for membership. Once a member the student is expected to support all departments of architecture activities and to aid as an individual, Sigma Upsilon Alpha projects. At the organization's meetings, prominent speakers, selected for their knowledge of student problems, offer advice to students.

TABARD

Supporting the campus literary magazine, Tabard, was the main function of Tabard, English honorary composed of students majoring in English with at least a "B" average in English subjects. This endeavor occupies the English enthusiasts the greater part of the year and results in a magazine that seems to have become a permanent campus institution but as yet lacks popular support. Tabard style, being vastly different from anything written hereabouts is not yet understood by the average reader, but the editors may yet succeed in educating their cohorts to the different style.

TAU BETA PI

Tau Beta Pi, national engineering honorary for the scholastic elite in engineering subjects, consists of 16 members this year. All juniors are in the upper tenth of their class while seniors are in the top fifth of their class. Other membership requirements are service to Alma Mater through distinguished scholarship and exemplary character as undergraduates, or by attainments in the field of engineering. The honorary seeks to foster a spirit of liberal culture in the engineering colleges of America. Sponsored each year by the organization are the Engineers' picnic, open to all engineers and the Engineers' open house in the spring. Tau Beta Pi is the oldest honor society in the country, founded in 1885.

TAU EPSILON

The cream of the crop of the University's interior decorators, members of Tau Epsilon, interior decorating honorary for students of sophomore, junior, and senior standings who have maintained a "B" average in interior decoration, fulfilled their constitutional functions with two parties, the first during the fall and the second during the Christmas season. The academic aims of the organization were met with an exhibit of work by members of the honorary. Tau Epsilon strives to give material benefit to students interested in the art of decorating.

Tau Sigma Delta is a national honorary fraternity for students of architecture and the allied arts. The fraternity includes 57 chapters all the way from Canada to Florida. Among the projects of the year were the sponsoring of the Colgate poster contest, and an exhibition in Fine Arts College of the work of the members. Membership is limited to seniors in allied arts and graduate students in architecture who have maintained an average of at least 1.8 and are in the upper quarter of their class. Social functions of the year included a picnic and an initiation banquet in the spring.

TAU THETA UPSILON

Tau Theta Upsilon, senior men's honorary, continued its program of service to the University during the past year. This set course called for a trophy for the annual Interfraternity sing contest and other awards at Winter Carnival and Moving-up Day. Members are chosen after they have been active in extra-curricular positions, among them duties in athletics, religion, student government or publications. Tau Theta Upsilon accepts only eight men each year. The organization was hard hit this year, losing at least two members to the army. The president elected in the fall was Milford Fahey, one of the first University men to answer the call to colors.

Down-to-earth practicality was the theme of Theta Pi, a technicians organization, whose members enriched their educational background by listening to speeches by prominent faculty members. Professor Earl Church, now engaged in instructing students interested in serving Uncle Sam in a photographic way, told Theta Pi members the why's and wherefore's of aerial photography at the group's fall smoker. The only item on the fall program was an alumni picnic at Highland Park. At the spring outing Theta Pi remembered Pearl Harbor with the aid of motion pictures of Pearl Harbor — before December, 1941.

THETA SIGMA PHI

Syracuse's women in journalism, members of Theta Sigma Phi, coed journalist honorary, busied themselves with picas, points, and programs for under-class coed writers in a year of fruitful activity. Louise Hennemuth was at the helm of the honorary and was ably supported by Edith Scully, vice-president; Constance Green, secretary; Florence Aronowitz, treasurer; and Martha O. Wright, archive keeper. This year the officers aspired to cultural programs, offering a varied schedule of speakers at their bi-weekly meetings. Dean M. Lyle Spencer and Prof. Laurance B. Siegfried of the School of Journalism were among the speakers.

ZETA PHI ETA

Members of Zeta Phi Eta, national speech honorary for sophomore and upperclass women in the School of Speech, put their vocal chords to good use this year. Wishing to further the United States drive to sell defense bonds and stamps, the platform artists organized a bureau to plan speeches for students interested in hawking Uncle Sam's bonds. As another contribution the group discontinued serving refreshments and put aside money for defense stamps. To be a member, a student must maintain a "B" average in speech subjects and a "C" in all other courses for two semesters in a row. The honorary holds social meetings the first Thursday of the month.

Senate-trained seniors help freshman women to become acclimated and to appreciate the opportunities offered to every coed. Once freshmen themselves, the senior guides have practical experience plus two years of preparation in Women's Student Senate. As sophomores, the future guides work in the Senate office, attend discussion groups, and carry out campus projects. Then forty junior guides are chosen to assist the seniors. The senior guides are assigned to each freshman cottage or group of freshman city women.

BASKETBALL

A one-hander by Joe Glacken.

SPARKED by a pair of juniors and one soph, Syracuse's Orange basketball team for '42 rocked along to a successful won-14, lost-6 season — and supplied a winning streak of seven straight games on the route. For the first time in the 17 years that Lew Andreas has directed Hill hardwood fortunes, three men were deadlocked for high scoring honors at the close of the season. Danny DiPace, Bob Shaddock, and Joe Glacken all racked up individual totals of 153 points.

There were several keys to the Syracuse success during the campaign. Two mighty big ones were Charlie "Red" Stanton and Gene Berger who managed to control most of the backboard play in every game.

Sophomore Glacken's one-handed push shot was another spark in the Piety cage machine. Joltin' Joe trailed DiPace in scoring for most of the season. However, together with Shaddock, he caught up with Danny's marksmanship record in the final game and finished the season with the greatest total of successful field goals.

The Orangemen celebrated the Golden Jubilee year of basketball in a pre-season exhibition contest with Springfield college, and then tackled a 20-game schedule — one of the toughest in Hill history. The Saltines dusted off Buffalo State, 67-25, as an "official" curtain-raiser, and followed this triumph by shading Manhattan, 41-35. Sharpshooter DiPace sparked the Hill five in both of these games with 19 and 13 point performances.

Syracuse dropped three heart-breakers in a row to Penn State, NYU, and Michigan State before hitting its stride again. In order, the Onondagans turned back Princeton, Cornell, and Niagara. Notre Dame's wild Irishmen tripped the Hillmen at South Bend, but that merely angered the Orange hoop-hunters. Their anger lasted for seven games — and on the way, Marquette, Temple, Fordham, Penn, Georgetown, Colgate, and Cornell were all trampled. During the first slaughter of Colgate, a 62-32 basket-barrage, DiPace and Berger were both injured. Dapper Dan was sidelined for the remainder of the year due to this injury.

Even with DiPace out of the lineup, it took an overtime skirmish with the rangy Penn Staters to finally turn back the surging Orange attack, 37-36. Previous to this setback, Syracuse had been mentioned prominently by metropolitan sport scribes as a probable contender in the annual NCAA court tournament to be held this year in Louisiana. But the recurrence of the Nittany "jinx" blasted all invitation hopes for Lew and his boys.

Determined to win their finale, the four Orange seniors paced the varsity to another rout of the hapless Colgate Raiders, 48-31, for the night with 11 points — five of them on foul shots.

BOXING

UNDER the leadership of Captain Loren Schoff, Syracuse's varsity belters once again swept through a successful season for their coach, Roy Simmons. Although not reaching the perfection of the previous season, the '42 boxers managed to defeat Penn State and Coast Guard, tie with Virginia, and lose only to Army during the dual meet campaign. The Orangemen were second to Maryland in the EIBA tourney, capturing two individual titles and one second place.

Captain Schoff won four straight bouts during the season, but, after having won 25 straight intercollegiate matches, was beaten for the first time in his ring career in the preliminary rounds of the EIBA meet. It was Captain Bob Baird of Penn State who finally turned the trick, after four vain attempts in previous meetings between the two clouters.

Toots Mirabito and Gerry AuClair were the crown-winners — at heavyweight and 120-pounds respectively. Ned Weber, in his first year as regular 155-pounder, gave Coast Guard's Mark McGarity a great battle in the finals before dropping a hair-line decision. Two other Hillmen, Juley Kuno and Johnny McArdle, also reached the semi-final round.

Perhaps the most spectacular bout of the entire campaign came in the Penn State dual meet, won by Syracuse, 5½-2½. In the last fight on the card, the heavyweight battle, the Orange champ, Mirabito, pounded the living stuffings out of Aldo Cenci — monstrous Nittany puncher.

SWIMMING

SYRACUSE'S swimming coach, Ted Webster, began his 13th year as Orange natator strategist last season, but the jinx didn't work against Tutor Ted. His team finished a fine season — winning seven matches in nine starts and compiling the best record of any varsity winter sport team on the Hill.

The veteran coach calls his well-balanced team "the best I've ever had."

Dave Worley, Bob Unterberger, and Jim Naylor were the squad's outstanding members. Also on the team were Ed Kriete, Captain Charlie Grable, Johnny Kublick, Jim Berens, Johnny Rich, Bob Keller, Gene Gilmore, Bill Nieznalski, George Nicholson, Stu Edson and Harry McKinnon.

Grable, Edson, McKinnon, and Rich are seniors and will be lost by graduation this June.

Naylor was at his best on the springboard this year, walking off with top honors against Union, Fordham, Amherst, Rochester, Penn State, Cornell, and Colgate having been edged out only by RPI's diver.

Worley swam in the 220 and 440-yard free-style events, while Unterberger swam in the 200-yard breaststroke event.

Kriete, in his first varsity appearance against Hamilton, easily copped the 50-yard freestyle event, and repeated this feat against Rochester.

Grable is called the "unsung" hero by Webster, as he did not win first place in many races but was used to grab the points whenever the Orange were in a tough spot. Grable was rated by the

WRESTLING

PROF Davison's Piety Hill wrestling combine started the season in weak style, dropping their first four matches against Lafayette, Penn State, Army, and Lehigh in convincing manner.

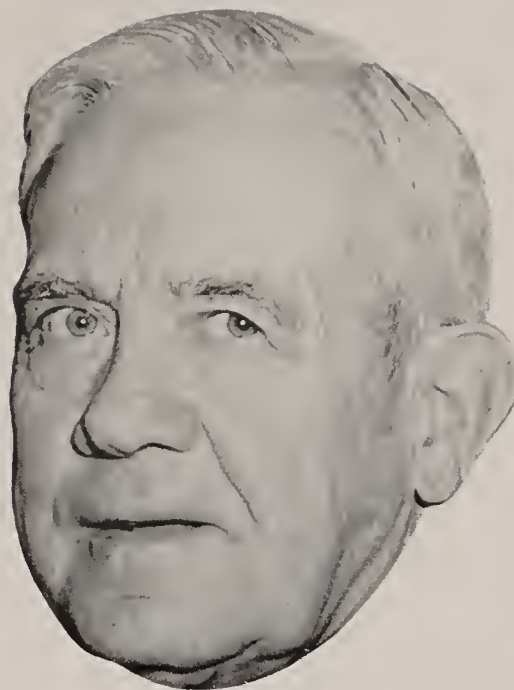

The Saltine forces then came to life, and, with Captain Nels Samson leading the way, proceeded to chalk up three straight wins over St. Lawrence, Colgate, and Rochester Mechanics. An unusually powerful Springfield outfit next invaded Archbold and held the Orange matmen to a draw, and Cornell's Eastern powerhouse climaxed their season in glorious fashion by scalping the Onondagans, 27-3.

The Hill aggregation started the year with Samson and Bill Mozur co-captaining the squad, but Mozur left the team in mid-season and Samson ably handled the situation from that time on.

Samson was the individual star for the Orangemen racking up eight wins against a lone defeat at the hands of Charlie Ridenour, Penn State's EIWA champion. In the intercollegiates, the little Hill bantamweight, who scored a fall in the quarter finals over Navy's Richard Ploss, was the only point-getter for his team.

Three other Piety grapplers batted over .500 in the matter of wins and losses for the year. Norm Wiedersum, steady 145-pound mat master, came through with five triumphs and four defeats, Frank Mazejko in the light heavyweight berth kept opponents in trouble continually, and Ken Chapman, sub for Bill Mozur in the unlimited class, proved his worth by dropping only one fight while trimming his rival four times.

The Hill contingent walloped Colgate, 28-5, in their most impressive win of the year. It was the 20th victory in a row over the Maroon.

SKIING

FROSH BASKETBALL

COACH RIBS BAYSINGER'S 1942 frosh cagers, with a victory streak of 10 straight games, closed their season unbeaten and were considered one of the best yearling squads ever to perform on Piety Hill.

Included in the win streak were double victories over Colgate, Cornell, and Cortland, and other triumphs over Manlius, CCBI, Ithaca college, and Morrisville.

The lineup for most of the games found Tom Mc-Tiernan and Jim Schneible at forward, Barney Werner at center, and Jack Sandwick and Andy Mogish at guard.

SYRACUSE'S 1942 skiers, coached by Jack Shaw, opened their season's campaign at Lake Placid's Sno-Bird meet, and then competed in the Eastern Inter-collegiates, the Winter Carnival meet at Clarkson, and the New York state freshman meet.

In the latter tournament, the team placed second in a field of seven. The frosh also placed second in their tournament, but won at Clarkson.

Capt. John Maxwell was considered the squad's best man. Bruce Bolton, Danny Giroux, Warren Bonney, Dick Smith, Dick Westin, Stan Perry, and John Chappell were the other members of the squad.

INTRAMURALS

WITH the fall of the new school year came the influx of autumn sporting events with football in its new six man-form rating supreme in intramural interest.

Kenny Molloy passed and ran the Sigma Chi sextet to the All-U title after a nip-and-tuck battle with the Engineer Clubbers. The second-team championship was taken by a strong Phi Psi combination.

Sigma Chi also won another crown, the swimmers coming through in the waterlanes for the All-U kingship. Sigma Alpha Epsilon's soccer and track teams managed to steal some glory by conquering all opposition in those two sports. The Pi Alpha Chi riflers had little trouble in ruling the ranges.

Came the early winter of 1942, and basketball and handball took over the intramural spotlight. The Phi Gam and Club 45 cage quintets staged a thriller before the Fijis could subdue their foes for the title. The Phi Gams also won the ice hockey supremacy, hockey being a feature of the annual winter carnival. The handball crown was won by the Stars who defeated Pi Chi in the finals.

SEVERAL drastic intramural changes went into effect at the beginning of the fall season. The point system, in use for several years, was suspended, six man football was substituted for the previous nine man game, and new lighting facilities were installed on Hendricks field and the gym field.

Results of all three alterations were effective and highly satisfactory. Elimination of the point system enabled teams to concentrate their strength in one or two sports, and six-man football provided an open game with emphasis on speed and passing.

Women's WINTER

In December WAA opened its indoor sports season in the little red brick building with basketball matches between sororities, living centers, and independent women. The floor creaked and the backboards vibrated as twenty teams engaged in a fight to the finish. Wilbur Cottage, captained by Virginia Schill, emerged victorious over the Theta Phi's in the finals to annex the trophy.

Eighty girls, managed by Elaine Searles, participated in singles and doubles ping-pong matches. Mary Alice Reed and Ruth Yudisky composed the winning doubles team, while Thelma Guenther was the singles winner.

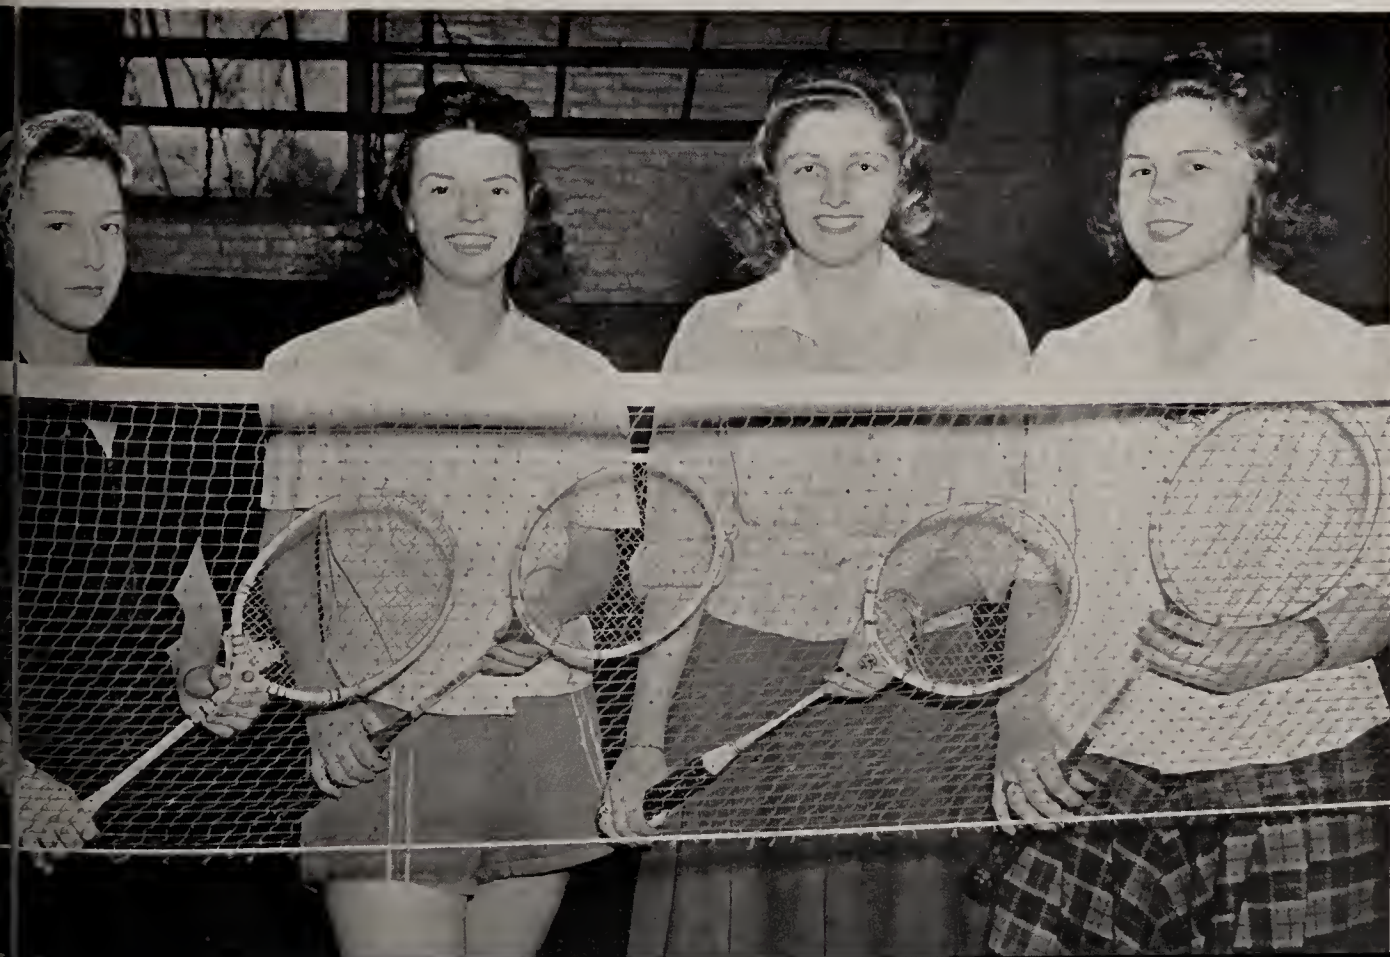

Bowling hit a new high this winter as thirty sorority and living center teams engaged in elimination meets. The teams, composed of four girls each, were divided into five leagues, and a cup was awarded to the houses having the highest bowling average. Mary Payne managed the tournament.

SPORTS

Under the management of Agnes Martin and Bunny Carroll, ninety campus sharpshooters frequented the rifle range twice a week. They received individual instruction from the coach, Sarge Smith, and two members of the men's varsity. Although the men won the meet between the freshman men's and women's teams, the girls made a good showing. The women's varsity participated in matches with Cornell, the men's varsity, and fraternity and living center teams. Awards were made at the annual banquet attended by both the men's and women's teams.

The modern dance group, composed of twenty-five coeds, was managed by Rosemary Glueck. These graceful exponents of the dance gave an illustration of the theory of the dance at the Modern Museum of Art and at the Spring Frolic. During Spring Week-end they performed in the pageant and trained most of the routines for it.

Ski enthusiasts kept their wax handy this winter as their prayers for snow were answered frequently. For the first time Syracuse held an intercollegiate ski meet during the Winter Carnival and made it highly successful by coming out on top. Veterans Nance Essex, Betty Bullard, Marian Jones, and Nancy Aubel participated in four meets. Directed by Fay Welch and Bob Williams, the girls took long cross-country trips and spent many a lively week-end dodging trees on their favorite trails in mountains nearby.

Sixty mermaids under Jean Llewellyn carried out an unusual swimming program this year. The girls marked off miles in the pool and took swimming jaunts to New York and Florida. They held a telegraphic meet with Swarthmore and finished up the season with intramural competition.

A new feature of the badminton singles tournament was arranged by Manager Doris Perry in the form of a loser's tournament. Five leagues competed in the regular round-robin competition with one hundred girls participating. Doubles team winners were Mary Lonergan and Sue Fish; singles winner was Evenly Houser. On March 8, WAA sponsored a Sports Day and invited competitors from William Smith, Keuka, and Wells colleges. Syracuse was decidedly the victor of the spoils when it took first places in basketball, badminton, swimming, ping pong, and bowling.

It was at the annual Spring Frolic on April 16 that Mary Jo Hewitt was elected head cheerleader, Nancy Aubel and Barbara Glenn, senior cheerleaders; Cornelia Senif and Priscilla Braun, junior cheerleaders. Betty Bullard and Aaltje Van Denburg were awarded the WAA blazers for outstanding work in the organization this year. The one night in the year that the members of the feminine sex took over the men's gym, the girls scared Sarge Smith out of his wits on the rifle range, gave Mike Hickok a run for his money in the bowling alleys, and had a time splashing around in Ted Webster's sacred tank.

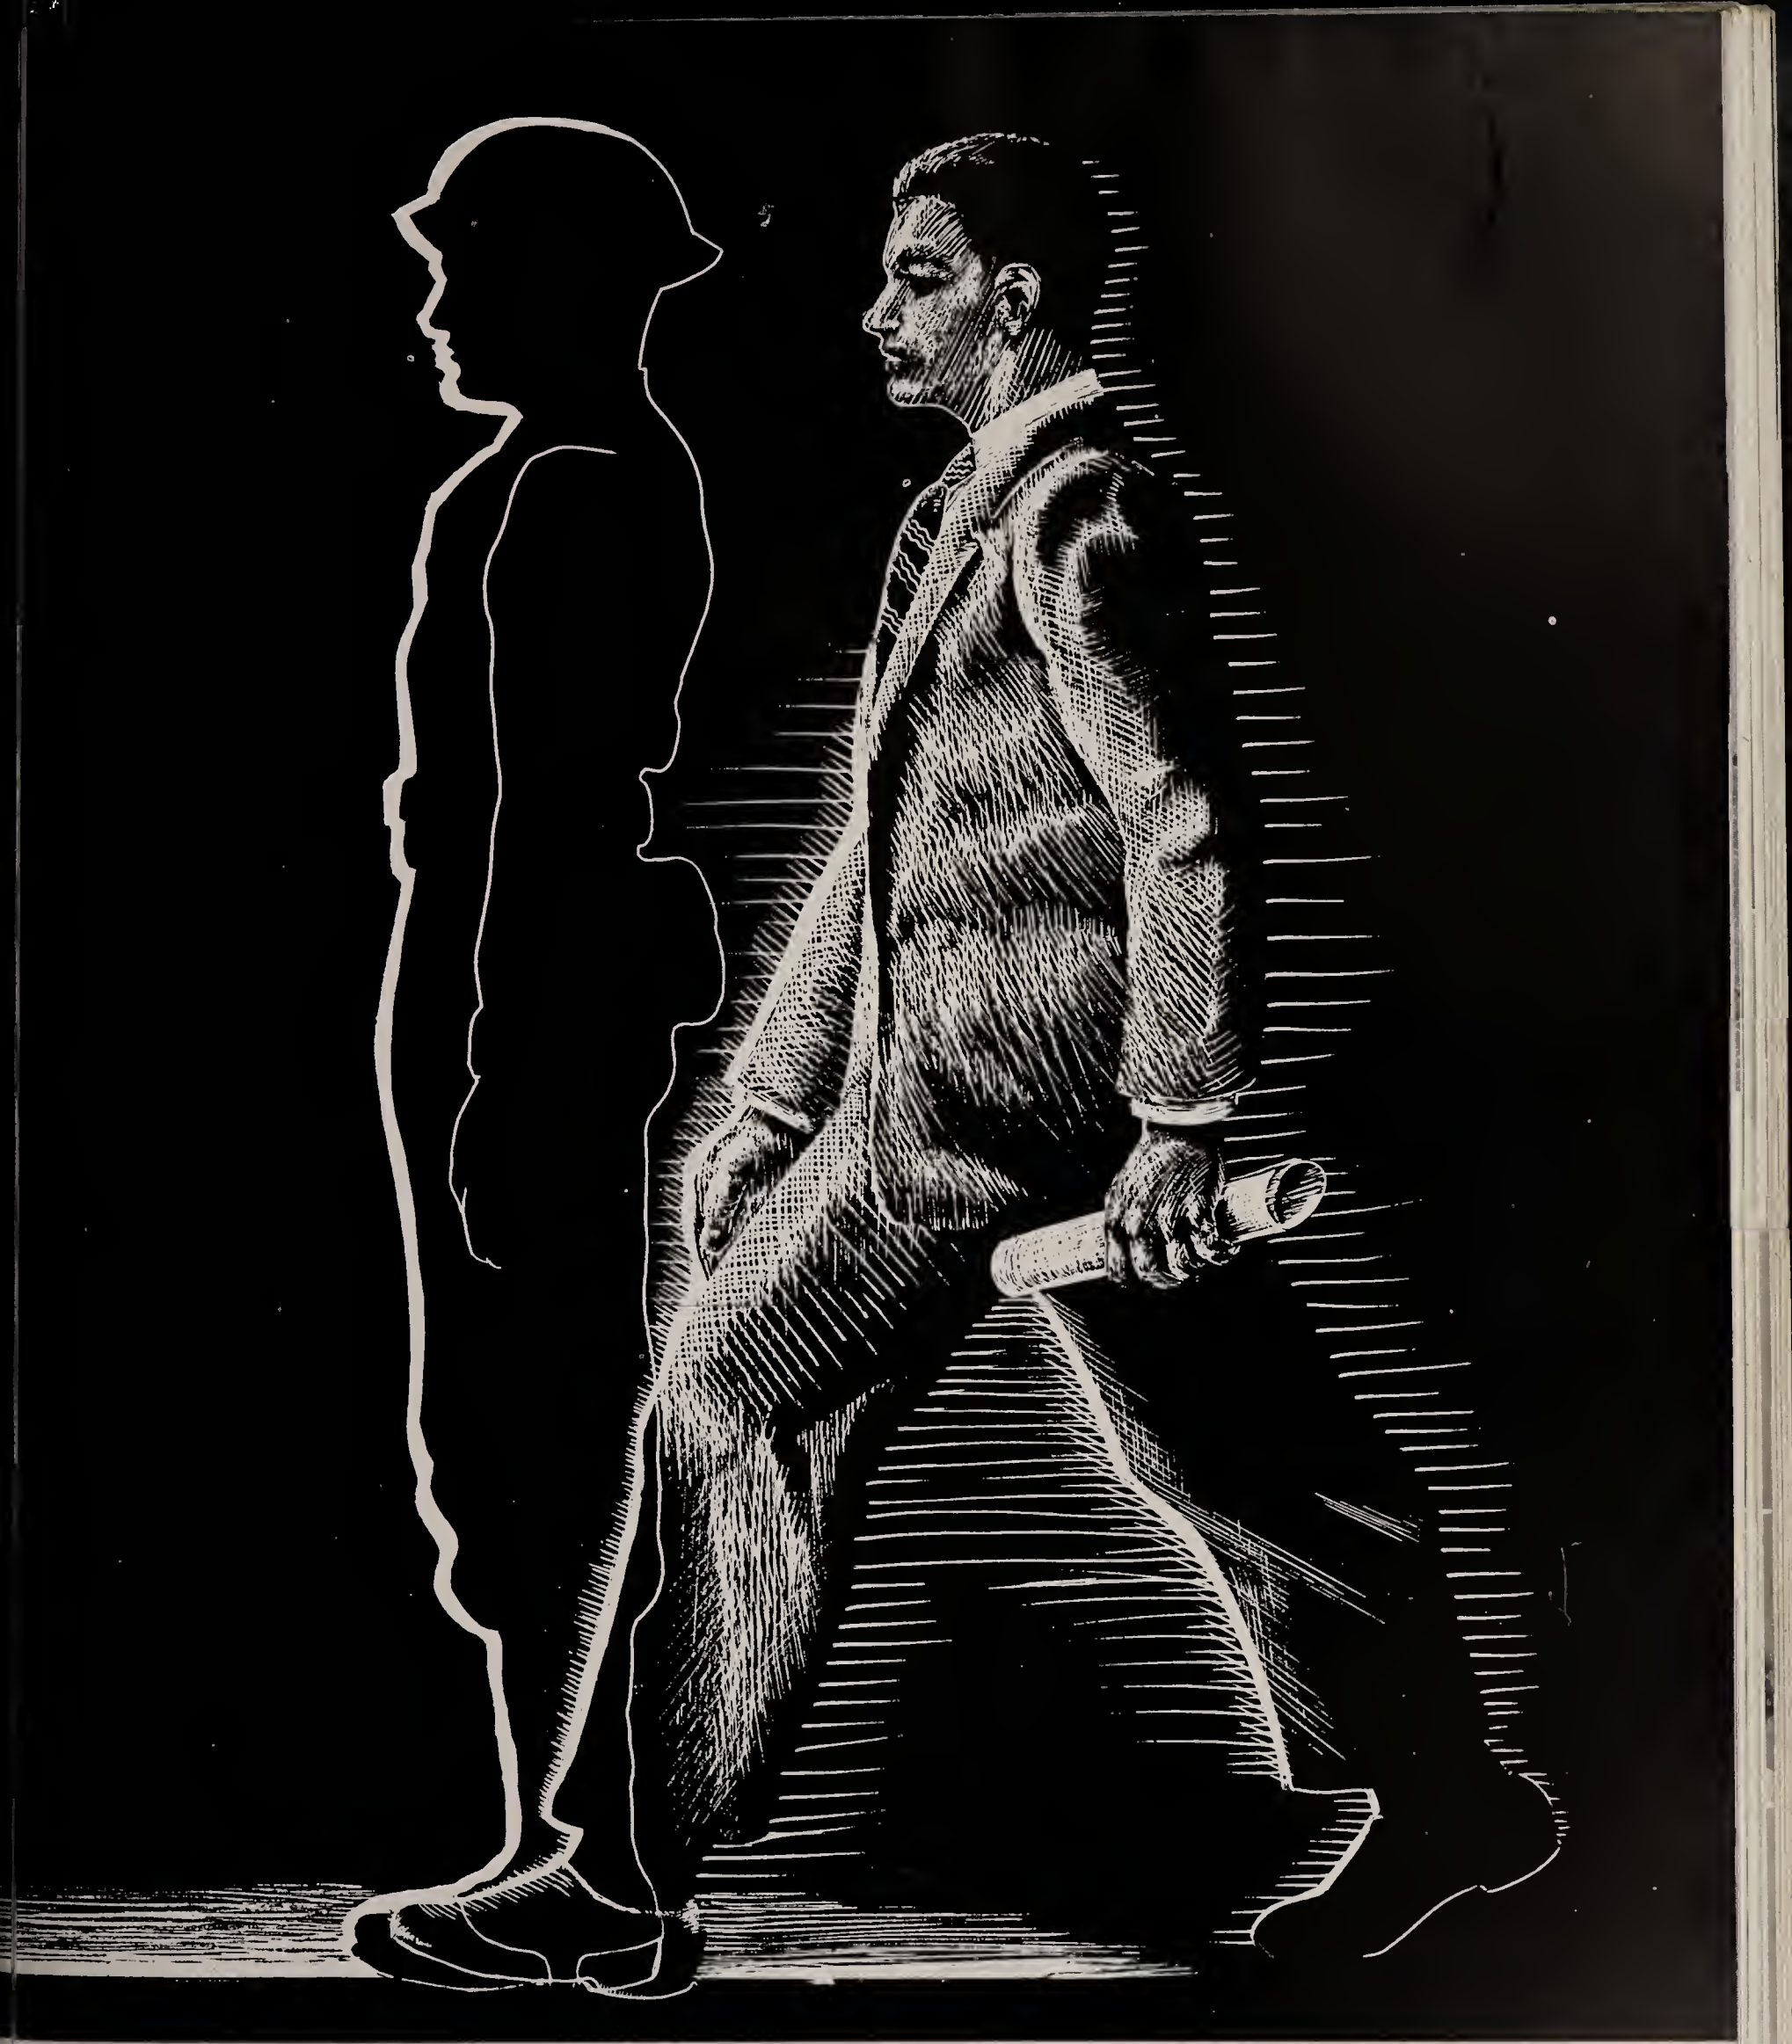

Then came vacation and the end of another year of WAA.

CREW

WITH the biggest eight in the East for 1941, averaging over 180 pounds and over 6 feet 2 inches in height, the Syracuse varsity crew, coached by Ned Ten Eyck, stroked to a successful season, winning two dual meets, losing one, and finishing third in a four-crew regatta.

George Hilfinger, rowing at the stroke position, was captain of the varsity, and with the exception of two regattas, the eight that Ten Eyck selected for the first race remained intact all season. The varsity crew finished fourth in the Poughkeepsie regatta, behind Washington, California, and Cornell.

Behind Hilfinger at No. 7 was Rog Waugh. George Bonney was No. 6, Howie La Dage No. 5, Dick Willenborg No. 4, Dale Uffelman No. 3, Harvey Hutcheon No. 2, Art Hughes in the bow, and Bill McDougall in the coxie position.

Due to adverse weather conditions, the Syracuse navy was about the last in the East to get on the water.

The first practice of the season was not until April 1, just 25 days before the opening race. In the opening regatta, the Syracuse sweepswingers, journeyed to New Haven to compete against the Eli. The Orangemen were leading most of the way on the Housatonic river, but in the last half mile, Yale put on a driving finish and edged out the Piety Hill shell by the narrow margin of four feet.

Taking to their home waters in the second race, the Orange oarsmen bounded back to nose out the Cornell varsity by a deck length in the closest race in Syracuse home-meet history. The Hill crew was minus the services of Dale Uffelman in this race and Jim Evans was moved up from the junior varsity to replace him.

With seemingly uncanny success on their own racing grounds, the varsity crew, after trailing throughout the race, edged out the MIT oarsmen by 18 inches in a two-mile classic.

ARRIVING at Poughkeepsie 22 days before the annual four mile classic, Syracuse's varsity, jayvee, and freshman crews began the longest training period for the one-day event that any Orange crew had ever undertaken

Coach Ned Ten Eyck drilled his men on the Hudson river every morning and afternoon of the entire 3-week training period. The last intensive training was on the Saturday of June 22 when final time trials were held for all shells.

Washington Huskies, winners of the 1940 regatta, were heavy favorites when June 25, the day of the race, rolled around. The weather was perfect as the shells took to the water at 6:45 that evening. Syracuse was in lane six, flanked by Wisconsin and Cornell.

Before a crowd of 25,000 onlookers watching from the observation train, small boats, and on the shore, the Syracuse shell started out slowly with a stroke of 34. At the mile and one-half mark, they were in seventh place. Then the beat was stepped up to 36 and the Orange shell passed Rutgers and MIT.

Going under the railroad bridge, one and a half miles from the finish, the Hill shell pulled up on Columbia and finally passed. A half-mile from the finish the Orange stroke was up to 38 and the shell had passed Princeton and was slowly creeping up on Cornell. However, the Orange finished fourth, a length and a quarter behind the Big Red. Washington won the race while California placed second.

COACH Lew Carr has completed 32 years of varsity baseball tutoring on Piety Hill, and one of the most successful of his many seasons was the 32nd in the spring of '41.

The Orange diamondmen garnered 16 wins against four losses, for a record that surpasses any in the last 15 years of Syracuse baseball.

And to add to his laurels, Carr produced a 10-game winner in Red Moran, ace flinger on the Saltine mound corps. Since 1931, no Hill pitcher had racked up 10 wins in one year, and so another mark was set by last year's nine.

Top slugging regular on the Orange team was Co-Captain Chuck Holly who patrolled the outer gardens and batted .364 for the season. Dan DiPace, who started the year at shortstop, hit a high 455, but DiPace participated in only five battles before he broke his leg in an out-of-town encounter. Jack McCabe ably handled the shortstop post after DiPace's injury.

The other Co-Captain, Puffy Pulaski, played left-field in convincing fashion and proved his worth by slugging .311. Red McPhail completed the hard-hitting garden combine, batting .315. The redhead was elected captain for the 1942 aggregation at the end of the season.

On the receiving end of the Orange firing line was Danny Slade, a flanker on Ossie Solem's football eleven, who steadied the pitchers throughout the year.

Just missing the select .300 batting circle was Joe Watt, another of Solem's gridders. Watt, only a sophomore, has two years of second-base duty ahead of him on the Hill.

Third base for the Saltines was taken care of by Soph Joe Kelly, weak at the plate, but strong afield. Kenny Hess, Piety first baseman who walloped the ball for a comparatively low .194 mark, nevertheless supplied the necessary punch at the plate for his teammates as he broke up several games with homers.

Ed Jantz, Rube Minor, and Ray Willmott, were other Syracuse flingers; Jantz finishing with a won-3 lost-2 record, Minor with a won-1 and lost-1 mark, and Willmott equalling Minor's accomplishment. Moran, in adding up his 10 triumphs, whiffed 53 of the opposition to set the Orange high in the department.

Chuck Holly had the "mosts" in two other fields, hits and runs. The senior co-leader hit safely 28 times and dented home plate on 21 occasions.

BASEBALL

Presentation of cup to Coach Lew Carr by Co-Capts. Pulaski and Holly.

Probably the most exciting encounter of the season was the Fordham battle, in which the home run bat of sophomore Kenny Hess played the feature role.

With Pulaski on first in the last of the ninth, the Hillmen behind, 3-2, with two out, and two strikes on Hess, the Ram pitcher sent the ball right down the center of the alley. Hess swung hard and rode the ball over the centerfield fence to break up the game.

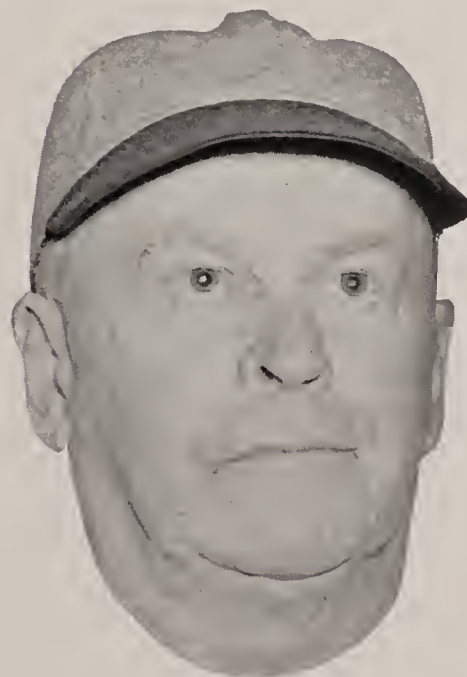

Another feature of the season was the breaking of the six year, 17-game winning streak of the Red Raiders over the Onondagans. With Moran on the mound, the Saltines found their batting eyes and pounded out 15 hits and eight runs, but the end of the ninth found the two nines deadlocked at 7-7. Came the last of the 11th and the Orange loaded the bases with one out. Holly, up next, worked the count to three and two, and then let the next one go by. It was called a ball and the battle was won, 8-7.

Holly and Moran garnered three bingles for four times at bat to lead the Hill hitters. Moran batted that way in most of his games, ending the season with a .327 batting average to further add to his pitching feats.

With the loss of only three regulars through graduation, the prospects for the season of '42 were bright for Coach Carr. Hess at first, Watt on second, DiPace at short, and McPhail in the outfield will be the nucleus around which the Orange mentor will build his team.

ONLY two home meets were scheduled for the spring's track campaign, and Tom Keane's veteran array split this pair, walloping Colgate, 86-49, and in turn being walloped by a star-studded Penn State team, 90 1/4-44 3/4.

In the annual indoor triangular meet at Ithaca, the Syracusans were nosed out by Cornell, with Colgate placing third. Cornell totaled 34 5/8 points, to the Orange's 27 5/6 and Colgate's 15 1/3.

Lynn Radcliffe and the mile relay team competed during the winter campaign at New York, Philadelphia, and Boston, with Radcliffe making a fine showing in the winter circuit runs.

Randy Lukens and Al Obrist were co-captains of the team. Lukens was injured in the Colgate 120-high hurdles event; he went into the army following his graduation.

The mile relay team consisted of Bob Greaves, Bill Coffman, Walt Neals, and "Thin Lynn." Wes Stansbury, a distance runner, excelled in the two-mile events for the Orange.

COACH DON CASETY'S varsity tennis squad racked up four victories against two defeats for one of the most successful net campaigns in recent years.

Capt. Gerry Manhold and No. 2 man Bob McLaughlin were the mainstays for the Orangemen throughout the season.

Netters Leo Canale, Ned Pearson, Dick Breckheimer, and Don Jeffries were the other Hill players who managed to hold their own against a majority of the Piety opponents. Syracuse defeated Union twice, 8-1 and 9-0, Niagara, 6-1, and American, 5-4.

COACH RIBS BAYSINGER'S frosh baseballers came up with the best record of all spring yearling teams as they racked up six victories against four defeats, with two triumphs over Cornell and single wins over Penn State, Morrisville, Manlius and Cortland.

Mal Mallette, ace cub hurler, finished with a winning season, three wins against two defeats. Other pitching standouts were Harry Leete and Jack Kettler. Completing the frosh nine were Jim Carragher, Bill Hoeppel, Joe Weber, Joe Sylvestri, Jiggs Decker, Bill Schmitt, Joe Glacken, and Bob Masterson.

FROSH CREW

COACH NED TEN EYCK put together an Orange yearling crew that was branded tops in the East on the waterways.

With Big Bill Hurley stroking the powerful cub combine, the frosh swept by Cornell and Harvard in the two spring regattas in easy fashion, making a fine reputation.

The freshmen lined up with Bill Stolberg in the bow, Gray Trombley in the No. 2 spot, and Bill Robinson in No. 3. Stan Barnes was in the No. 4 position, Bob Crowell at No. 5, Dick Bluhm at No. 6, and Bill Oles at No. 7.

Steady coxie for the oarsmen was Bill Hrushesky.

The Piety yearlings entered the annual Poughkeepsie regatta as favorites to outrow all other cub outfits. However, they could place no better than third in the race, with overconfidence blamed for upsetting the Saltine aspirations for this major victory.

And it was the same Cornell crew which the Orangemen had easily beaten earlier in the season that reached the finish line ahead of the Hill frosh. Several cubs offer a fine varsity prospect.

SYRACUSE'S larruping linksmen of 1941, winners of nine dual matches against one setback, brought the New York state intercollegiate title to the Orange trophy room for the third straight year.

John Ward, Bobby Staats, Bud Naylor, Jack Knaab, Jack McElwain, and Don Shopiro composed the team.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

First Row: M. Yoder, J. Smith, treas.; P. Hovey, vice-pres.; P. Basye, pres.; M. Sanders, sec.; P. Peck. Second Row: P. Danz, R. Feldman, S. Bowman, M. Northrop, F. Pierce, J. Bullock.

WE might have been "green" when we first came, but frosh week, rushing, and that grand freshman mixer in the gym after the Clarkson game made us feel pretty much at home. Our officers, with Paul Basye at their head, carried out plans for the freshman dance at the Syracuse Fine Arts museum, downtown. The executive committee presented a freshman constitution to WSS and MSG, clarifying the standing of the class, its functions and the duties of the officers. We pointed with pride to Don Vesper, fleet-footed football man, Tom McTiernan, ace scorer on the frosh basketball quintet, and Dick Smith, skiing star.

Exams weren't so bad after all, and we began to appreciate the new university regulation for studying hours. With the second semester came initiation into sororities and fraternities, class elections and moving-up day. A good year this first one, but we're still glad to be sophomores!

COMING back to school was a pleasure for us Sophomores for we knew this was the year to start asserting ourselves in campus activities. We went out for varsity athletics, MSG, Civil Service, and the varied phases of dramatics, debate, Chapel, and publications, if we were men. Coeds in our class vied for positions in WAA, attended WSS discussion groups, entered into Panhellenic activities, and spent long hours working down at the Civic, at the Castle, or in the Chapel.

We proudly presented the "Sophomore Hop" after the Colgate game, a fitting climax for an exciting day. The gym, decorated as a stadium, was packed with 1100 couples dancing to the music of Dick Stabile. A profit of $684 resulted from what is believed to be the largest dance ever held on the hill—orchids to Bruce Bolton and his executive committee. In the spring we received our junior positions and Moving-Up Day saw us leave our underclass days behind.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

First Row: D. Di Pace, pres.; J. Taylor, vice-pres.; L. Franklin, sec.; A. Hughes, treas. Standing: P. Evans, M. Bowman, J. McCabe, P. Rogers, M. Brennan.

ASSUMING our place in the upperclass bracket, we Juniors set about to fulfill our various responsibilities right away. This year we definitely specialized our course of study in preparation for careers of all kinds. Those of us who studied were initiated into honoraries, and the rest of us decided it was high time we started taking our "book-larnin'" seriously.

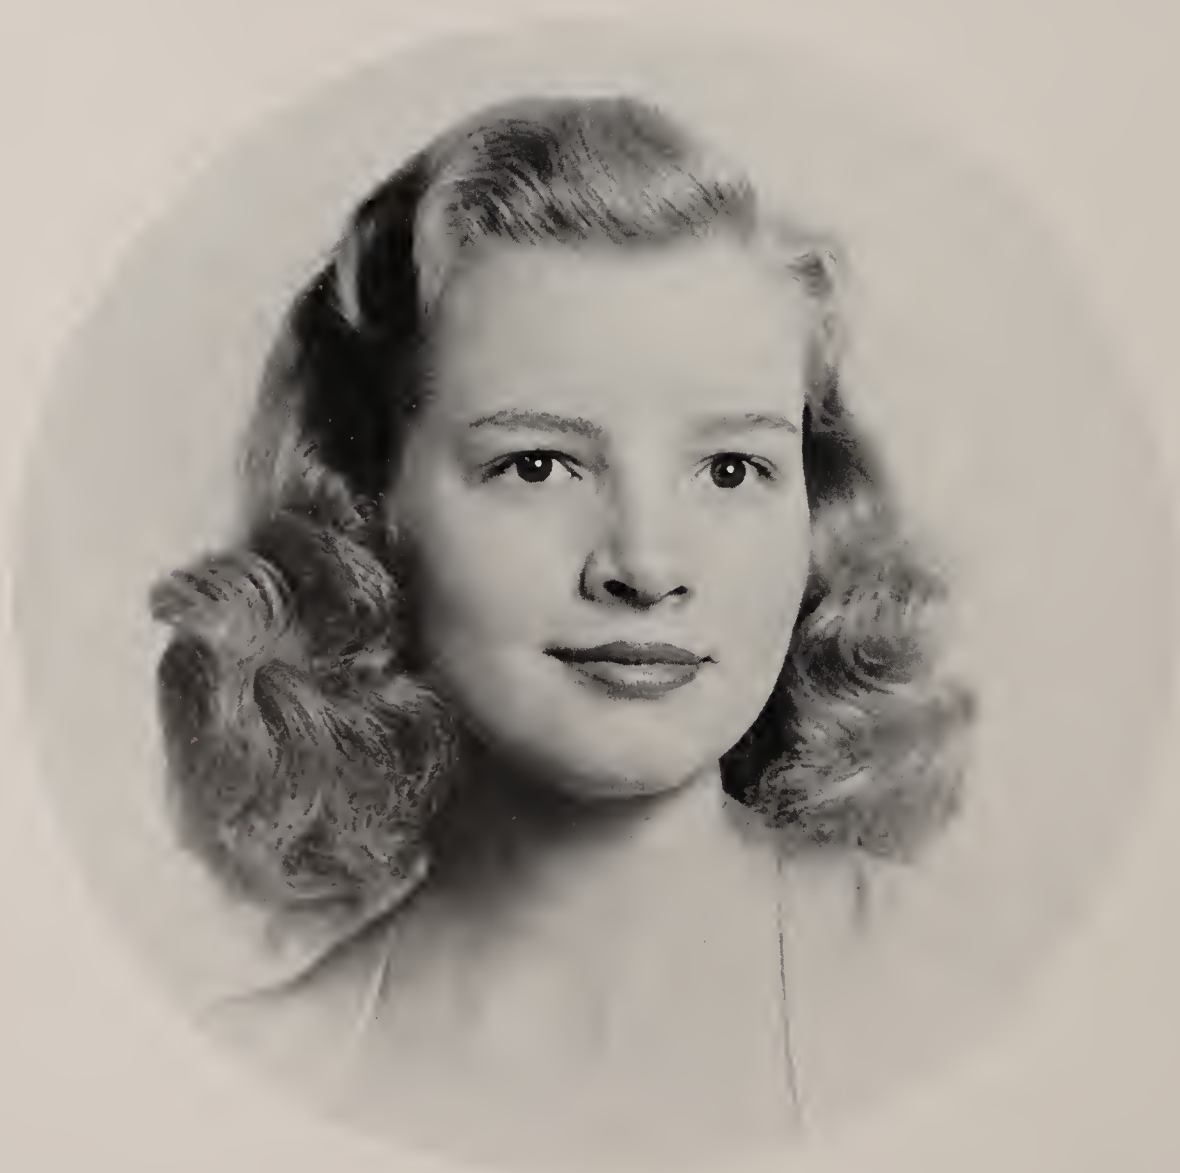

On the eve of Moving-Up Day we presented the Junior Prom—the highlight of Spring Week-end. Four of our pulchritudinously gifted coeds were selected as Junior Beauties. Chairman John Farrell and his assistants did a grand job of renovating the gym into a ballroom, and everyone admitted that it was a beautiful dance.

With spring elections came senior positions for many of us, but to all of us they meant the first step in preparation for our final year at Syracuse.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

First Row: L. Taylor, B. Walker, vice-pres.; C. McPhail, pres.; J. MacKain, sec.; J. Maxwell, treas. Second Row: C. Sheldon, P. Blake, L. Gettman.

OUR last year as college students—it was hard to believe that time could pass this year that we really appreciated all college had done for us.
this year that we really appreciated all college has done for us.

Members of the class of '42 attended the "Turkey Trot" in Slocum the night before Thanksgiving. On February second, we presented the Senior Ball with music by Harry James. Barbara Walker was crowned queen in the mid-night Cinderella scene and reigned supreme over her court with Sally Rowe, Barbara Hopkins, and Dorothy Dodge as ladies-in-waiting. Ball chairman Jesse Kaplan and his able committee proudly announced a profit of $693, which went in our class fund.

In the spring we got together for the last time before graduation on Class Day. June eighth we donned our caps and gowns to receive our diplomas and were graduated from Syracuse University.

On' Sales Drive Opens Today

Sales campaign for the 1942 Onondagan will get under way at 2 o'clock today when the editors meet with sophomores interested in working on the yearbook. Sophomores who the most in their class will also receive one page each.

These pages will be in a special magazine section of the 1942 Onondagan yearbook.

AGD Wins Contest; Sells 172 Yearbooks

Alpha Gamma Delta won the Onondagan sorority contest by selling 172 yearbooks outside of the chapter. Kappa Alpha Theta sorority placed second with 126 outside sales.

'On' Sales Exceed Last Year's Record

'42 Yearbook to Include Sophomore Pictures

Selling subscriptions for 181 more books than were sold over a similar period last year, energetic Onondagan salesmen already have visions of record sales this year. The yearbook booth at registration is directed by Betty Jane Ryan, editor-in-chief of the yearbook; Arnold Burdick, associate editor; Jean LeGallez, business manager; and Thomas Boggs, circulation manager.

Comparing this year's sales to those of last year, Boggs said: "We've topped last year by approximately 60 percent. The full page of the reasons we've been successful may be because of the inclusion of a sophomore this year's On, since many are registering the first time. Kappa Alpha Theta has been underclassmen." A pamphlet explaining the sitting fee and previous credit for 1942 Onondagan has been distributed on campus by the sophomore class. Discussing the sitting fee, Boggs said: "We have

THIRST ASKS NOTHING MORE

It's natural to get thirsty. So it's natural to pause at the familiar red cooler for an ice-cold bottle of Coca-Cola — the perfect answer to thirst. Enjoy one now.

It's Better —
Ask Your Neighbor

Wearing fashionable campus clothes from Witherill's, Dorothy Borchert, Priscilla Stewart, Betty J. Collette, and Lucille Follay gather in the Student Union for a between-class "coke." Approved and correct college attire is important . . . let the well-trained staff of Witherill's solve your problem of what to wear.

WITHERILL'S

Syracuse's Own Store

Charming Ellen Fahey, senior cheerleader, models a fashionable glen plaid suit from the extensive selection offered at The Blanche La Clair Shop.

Smart, youthful styles have made this women's shop popular with Syracuse coeds. There are fashionable clothes for every affair.

CONGRATULATIONS to Betty Jane Ryan, Jean Le-Gallez, and their fine staff, for the excellent work accomplished in this 1942 Onondagan. It has been a genuine pleasure to work with this group and to combine the technical ability of our organization with the editorial ability of the staff. The illustrations on this page indicate the close association necessary between the engraver and the staff in the making of a fine yearbook.
